ARMORED CARS GUARD BOMBAY AFTER BATTLE

TROOPS RUSH TO END WAR BETWEEN RACES

Mobs Light Huge Bonfires While Comrades Loot Shops in City.

Bombay, India (Tuesday), May 17 (A.P.).—Armored cars from Poona patrolled the streets of Bombay today, and troops rushed here in their wake to quell fierce fighting of Hindus and Moslems in which 64 have been killed and at least 650 wounded during the last three days.

Whole districts of Bombay were in a state of siege last night as the riots between the hostile races raged unabated, after having taken a further toll of 40 lives during the day.

The Second Battalion of the Green Howards, a British regiment stationed at Poona, left at an hour's notice early today aboard fast special trains for this embattled city. The tanks had been ordered here only a few hours before.

Huge Bonfires Blaze.

During the night mobs of men, wielding forbidden iron rods, knives, stones and bottles, swirled through the streets in fierce combat by the light of huge bonfires that blazed from one end of Girguam road to the other. Other mobs looted Moslem shops.

Police futilely struggled to restore order, firing into the rioters in several parts of the city. Many of the police were on the verge of collapse from three days of almost ceaseless duty under conditions of tremendous difficulty.

At least 16 were killed and 200 injured in yesterday's renewal of the riots, swelling the total casualties of the communal warfare. The situation was so serious Sir Frederick Sykes, governor of the Bombay presidency, who left Saturday for the summer mountain resort of Mahabaleshawar, returned by airplane.

Darkness Increases Combat.

As darkness fell the dust and din of combat was more intense than ever. The combatants laid about them with knives and rods while stones and bottles hurtled through the air.

Leaping, fighting figures were silhouetted against the flames in Girguam road. The road was strewn with goods of every description from looted Moslem shops.

A touch of comic relief in the Macabre surroundings was provided by a party of Moslems whose suspicious corpulence as they waddled down the road aroused a suspicious police picket. The Moslems were searched and their bodies gradually became leaner and leaner as yard after yard of valuable silks and gold and silver ebmroideries were unwound from beneath their ample shirts.

4 Men Release Girl For Ransom of $300

Philadelphia, May 16 (A.P.).—Nathan Gerson, a laundry owner, reported to police tonight that his 19-year-old daughter Dora was kidnaped by four Negroes last Saturday, held prisoner for 35 hours and released today, after payment of a $300 ransom. Gerson said he refrained from communicating with the authorities before his daughter was returned for fear she might be harmed. The kidnapers communicated with him twice, he said, demanding $1,000.

He finally induced them to accept $300, which he paid to one of the men on a street corner today. Two hours later the girl was pushed from an automobile two blocks from her home.

Capital Swelters As Kiosk Hits 94

Heat Wave Also Felt in New York, Boston and New England.

A temperature tally of 94 degrees at the kiosk yesterday represented the warmest weather for Washington this spring since the advent of straw hats. The official maximum reading was 90 degrees.

The hottest May 16 in New York, 82 degrees, was recorded there. The previous record was 81 degrees in 1906.

All New England experienced extreme heat, as Boston registered 93 degrees, while New Hampshire and Vermont exceeded the 90-degree mark. An 85-degree reading in 1929 for Boston was the former high mark.

853 Flee New Liner As Flames Destroy It

675 Survivors Accounted for as Blaze Ravages French Ship Georges Phillipar in Gulf of Aden; Sabotage Is Hinted at Port.

Aden, Arabia, May 16 (U.P.).—The new French liner Georges Phillipar was destroyed by fire in the Gulf of Aden today while approximately 853 men, women and children fled from her blazing decks in lifeboats.

Radio advices from rescue ships definitely accounted for 675 survivors. Among them were three persons severely burned. Only three known deaths were reported. The vessel carried about 600 passengers, many of them women and children, and a crew of 253.

Among the known fatalities was a French girl who was injured and died on the rescue ship Mahsud. She was buried at sea. Three or four persons were seriously burned and believed dead.

Several lifeboats capsized while being launched and it was feared some passengers were drowned. Two sailors were reported adrift in a lifeboat. Capt. Vicq, 54-year-old master of the Georges Phillipar, was rescued.

The fire on the Georges Phillipar started about dawn when most of the passengers were asleep. It spread rapidly over the 17,000-ton vessel—which had been seriously damaged by fire while under construction at St. Nazaire in 1931—and there was a rush for lifeboats.

Meanwhile a rescue fleet was converging on the scene of the fire, which was 5 miles from Cape Guardafui, Italian Somaliland. The liner was en route from China to Marseilles and was putting into Aden.

Among the rescue vessels were the British freighter Contractor, which picked up 129 survivors and headed for Aden; the British liner Mahsud, which picked up 134 and is en route to Aden; the Russian freighter Sovetskaia Neft, which rescued almost 400 persons and then lost radio contact with other ships. The Russian vessel's destination was not known and repeated efforts to contact it by wireless were unsuccessful. Capt. Vicq was aboard the Sovetskaia Neft.

The Japanese liner Hakone Maru also sped to the aid of the French

HUNTERS FORMALLY ACCEPT FEDERAL AID

Authorities Here Requested to Continue Search for Ransom Money.

Hopewell, N. J., May 16 (A.P.).—The firm step of the ageing "Jafsie" carried him tonight along a circuitous trail toward the extortionist to whom he paid $50,000 ransom, while the police formally reenlisted the wide flung forces of the Government in the task of avenging Baby Lindbergh.

Dr. John F. Condon, the educator who came out of virtual retirement at 72 to assist Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, today peered at the rogues' galleries of jails and prisons in Westchester County, N. Y.

He was hopeful he might find the likeness of the extortionist, who appeared to be a Scandinavian and was known to him only by his first name. This was the man to whom he gave $50,000 in a Bronx (New York City) cemetery—$50,000 supplied by Col. Lindbergh, which the colonel raised, according to one published account, by borrowing $25,000.

Condon Met Only One.

Beginning tomorrow, Dr. Condon also will attend the daily police line-up in New York City on the theory that either the extortionist might be a professional criminal, or that he might endeavor to hide himself in jail for a minor offense.

Dr. Condon, it was officially stated, told police he met personally only one member of the gang with whom he dealt, but this member is presumed to have told him there were four other men and a woman. The shadow figure he treated with in the cemetery also claimed that one member of the gang was acquainted with Mr. Condon.

These bare uncontroverted facts still left open to conjecture the question of whether the criminals in contact with Dr. Condon were one and the same as the five-man gang with whom John Hughes Curtis communicated off the Atlantic seaboard.

Curtis at Rogues Galleries.

Curtis also inspected various rogues galleries during the day, visiting the one at the Newark police headquarters before dawn. Authorities said this task would occupy both Curtis and Dr. Condon for several days more.

Dr. Condon momentarily halted his tour after visiting Chief of Police Edward Quirk, at Yonkers, N. Y. The educator's only comment was to Military Won't Support New Cabinet Based on Political Parties.

MINISTER IS ELECTED LEADER OF SEIYUKAI

Reports of Naval Mutiny Are Groundless; Rites for Inukai Tomorrow.

Tokyo (Tuesday), May 17 (A.P.).—Leaders of the army gave notice today they would refuse to support any new Japanese cabinet based on political parties. They insisted a national cabinet be formed.

The action of the army was taken to mean that plans for the formation of a cabinet by Kisaburo Suzuki, home minister, who accepted the presidency of the Seiyukai party today, would have to be given up. It had been thought certain M. Suzuki would succeed the late Premier Suyoshi Inukai, slain by assassins Sunday.

His informal agreement to fill the late premier's place in the Seiyukai's leadership averted dissensions that threatened to split the ruling party. Eldermen of the party, who decided to support him, persuaded Takejiro Tokonami, railway minister, another possible candidate, to give up his ambition for the presidency early today.

Mr. Suzuki will be installed formally as president of the party at a mass meeting of the Seiyukai's parliamentary members this afternoon. It was taken for granted that he would be the next premier in accordance with Japanese custom which hands that post to the leader of the dominant party.

Navy Is Cautioned.

Reports abroad of a naval mutiny proved entirely groundless today on the basis of an official check-up, which found all naval bases quiet.

Admiral Mitsea Osumi issued an order declaring "all naval personnel must observe the utmost caution to prevent a disturbance of the public mind."

Meanwhile, army headquarters announced that eleven cadets who surrendered to the military police Sunday night will soon be tried by a court-martial and dealt with according to military discipline.

Beyond identifying the perpetrators of the week-end terrorism as eleven cadets and six naval ensigns, the authorities kept the identities of the surrendered men a secret.

The 450 soldiers called out to aid the police in keeping order found

Smith for Sales Tax; Young Will Not Run

New York, May 16 (A.P.).—Alfred E. Smith, candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, tonight advocated passage of the proposed manufacturers' sales tax.

Owen D. Young, who has been pointed to frequently in recent weeks as a likely Democratic candidate for the Presidency, a few hours earlier stated in unequivocable terms he would not accept the nomination if made.

Mr. Young, chairman of the board of the General Electric Co., had been considered by many as one of the principal dark horses if Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt failed to get the first ballot nomination his supporters predict. But today he wrote to an old friend, John Crowley, publisher of the Little Falls (N. Y.) Times.

"I say definitely and finally that I can not, for reasons which are so controlling as not to be open to argument, accept a nomination for the Presidency, if made."

Mr. Smith, the "happy warrior" of New York Democracy, who to date has 48 convention votes pledged to him, took a positive stand on the sales tax and many other governmental matters in an address in which he outlined a ten-point "financial program for the present crisis."

He attacked opponents of the sales tax for a slogan he said had been attributed to them by the press—"in order to make up the deficit, soak the rich."

"Soak capital and you soak labor," Smith said in rebuttal, adding:

"The demagogue won't agree to that, but it's true just the same."

The congressional program Smith outlined in the address, broadcast over a Nation-wide network, was:

1. Pass the sales tax.

2. Slash to "the extreme limit" all unnecessary appropriation of public money.

3. Empower the President to make an "immediate consolidation of governmental activities and bureaus, and in other ways to reduce the cost of government."

4. Halt the passage of more veterans' legislation; refuse to pass the "obnoxious" bonus bill; appoint a

SENATE CHIEFS BEAT COUZENS' HIGH TAX PLAN

CONNALLY SPONSORS LOWER SURTAX RATE

By J. B. McDONNELL.

Republicans and Democratic leaders of the Senate repulsed the first major onslaught on their compromise tax bill yesterday, only to be confronted by another major attack and an out and out filibuster.

They beat down the proposal by Senator James Couzens (Republican), of Michigan, to increase the income tax rates dictated to the finance committee by Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills. The vote was 40 to 31, Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas, immediately proposed another substitute income tax scale, higher than that in the committee bill.

The filibustering began when Senator Huey Long (Democrat), of Louisiana, who earlier in the day had refused to agree to a limitation on debate, took the floor in the course of the night session. Leaders had decided they had the votes and they might as well go along and tire out the rebels. Senator Long rejected overtures in the night session, as he had in the day, saying that he just felt like talking, and he did talk until the Senate recessed at 10 o'clock at night.

First of Many Tests.

Although the vote on the proposal of the multimillionaire senator from Michigan was an important test of strength, it was only the first of many which the leaders will have to meet before they can send the heotically changed budget-balancing tax bill to conference.

Senator Connally, who frequently protests he is just a new member of the Senate and doesn't want to seem brash, but who has played an important part in the history of the bill in the Senate so far, immediately offered his amendment providing for material increases in the income tax schedules.

Amendment Comparisons.

The Couzens amendment provided a normal tax of 6 per cent on the first $4,000 of income, and a 12 per cent normal tax on income above $4,000, with surtaxes beginning at 1 per cent at $6,000, and going up to 63 per cent above $1,000,000.

The Connally amendment incorporated, substantially, the 1922 schedules, except it raised the surtaxes on the higher incomes. The normal tax on the first $4,000 would be 4 per cent and 8 per cent above that. Senator Connally would carry the surtaxes from 1 per cent on $6,000 to 55 per cent on income of more than $1,000,000. He would thus increase the surtaxes from the 1918 maximum of 40 per cent imposed on incomes above $200,000.

As debate was begun on the Connally amendment it seemed to have much the same support and opposition as did the Couzens amendment, although Senator Connally was hopeful he could win a few more votes than were recorded for the higher Couzens schedule. The latter proposed the highest income tax schedule in history. The Connally schedule was the next highest.

It may be voted on today. Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, ranking minority member of the finance committee, sought to shut down debate in the course of

SPLIT IN RAIL LABOR ON WAR DEBTS BARED

Leaders of Six Groups Tell Hoover They Oppose Plan of Other Unions.

(Associated Press.)

Sharp dissension within the ranks of the 21 railway labor brotherhoods over a proposed plan for a 25-year moratorium on war debts owed the United States was aired yesterday before President Hoover.

The leaders of six railway labor groups asserted after a conference with the Chief Executive late in the afternoon that they were emphatically opposed to the moratorium plan suggested to him last Friday by the presidents of seven other rail-labor brotherhoods.

Mr. Hoover is opposed to the moratorium suggestion. It calls for partial cancellation of all war debts to the United States in proportion to imports from this country into the debtor nations concerned.

The plan for a lengthy debt suspension was proposed first by Alfred E. Smith before a political meeting here several weeks ago.

The six labor leaders yesterday left with the President a statement opposing the suggestions deposited at the White House in a similar brief last week.

"Unfortunately," their statement yesterday said, "this plan and statement (of last Friday) were issued or published in a manner that might give the impression that they had the indorsement of railway labor generally."

G. W. Laughlin, legislative representative of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, asserted yesterday the seven organizations proposing the moratorium represented only 550,000 workers. The fourteen other brotherhoods, he said, represent 1,200,000 employes.

Laughlin said that although only six of the fourteen brotherhoods were represented at the White House yes-

GENEVA IS STIMSON WHITE HOUSE TOPIC

Secretary Voices Optimism on Arms Negotiations in Progress.

By HAROLD J. T. HORAN.

Secretary Stimson lunched with President Hoover yesterday at the White House and in the course of their extended conversation revealed the optimistic trend of the negotiations now going on in Geneva. The fortnight which the Secretary spent in Geneva enabled him to make a valuable close-up study of the situation in Geneva with regard to disarmament as well as the Far Eastern situation.

The Secretary is understood to believe that the disarmament conference will be a success because it can not afford to be a failure. The following salient points were made by the Secretary in his talk with the President:

First—The disarmament conference was so long in getting under way because the delegates had failed to make the necessary arrangements on political questions before the meeting.

Second—The antagonism of France which at one time threatened to break up the conference has gradually evolved under the direction of Paul Boncour to a more conciliating viewpoint which augurs well for future developments.

Third—The Far Eastern situation occupies the attention of the disarmament conference almost as much as the question of arms reduction itself and the Secretary has sounded out the other great powers especially

Kansas' 20 Votes Go for Roosevelt

Resolutions Group Rejects Proposal Favoring Repeal of 18th Amendment.

Lawrence, Kans., May 16 (A.P.).—The Kansas delegation to the Democratic National Convention was instructed by the party's State convention late today to cast its twenty votes for Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt for the Democratic presidential nomination. Claims of administration leaders to sufficient votes to control the State gathering were verified by the instruction.

The unit rule will apply. The delegation is to remain by Roosevelt until a majority votes otherwise.

The resolutions committe rejected a measure proposed by Chauncey B. Little, wet candidate for nomination for United States senator, to place the convention on record as favoring repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

Betty Gow Is "Amused" By Reports of Suicide

Hopewell, N. J., May 16 (A.P.).—Betty Gow, the nurse of the murdered Lindbergh baby, was at the Lindbergh home and in good health today, despite persistent rumors that she had committed suicide.

The rumor, apparently based on a statement made over some undetermined radio station, began to circulate yesterday, and had spread across the country today. A telephone call to the Lindbergh home brought the information that Miss Gow was in good health and was "amused" at the reports of her suicide. Other rumors just as fantastic were in general circulation

Police at Capitol Wait Red Disorder

(Associated Press.)

A rumor that a communistic demonstration was to be brought to the doors of the Supreme Court was the signal yesterday for mustering a special police guard to patrol the corridors of the Capitol about the entrance to the court.

But, although several additional policemen were present throughout the day, there was no untoward incident to interrupt the reading of opinions by the justices. There was no explanation of the source of the rumor.

Many letters have been received from communists in different countries about the Scottsboro, Ala., case, in which seven Negroes were condemned to die for assaulting two white girls. This case, however, is not yet formally before the court for action.

G.O.P. WEIGHS PLANS OF CAMPAIGN CHEST

Outlook for Funds Better Than Few Months Ago, Leaders Say.

By EDWARD T. FOLLIARD.

The problem of raising money for the 1932 campaign—and it is a perplexing problem in this lean year—was discussed at the White House yesterday by President Hoover and officers of the Republican national committee.

What was said at the conference was not revealed, but many influential Republicans are known to feel that the outlook for raising money is now somewhat better than it was a few months ago. The rosier hue, in their judgment, has been produced by the prospect of a liberal prohibition plank in the Republican platform.

Many who have contributed to the Republican campaign fund in the past have served notice this time that they have no intention of giving money to a party that wants to perpetuate prohibition.

On the other hand, there are dry contributors to be considered. In 1928, for example, one of the largest donations to the Republican fund came from S. S. Kresge, a stanch friend of prohibition. Mr. Kresge contributed $36,000.

The campaign committee of the Antisaloon League spent $172,000 in 1928 in behalf of the Republican party. This, however, was more than offset by what the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment expended in behalf of the Democratic party. The association, according to a re-

Orono, Me., May 16 (U.P.).—A posse, which included students and faculty members of the University of Maine, tonight searched dense woods near Aurora, 30 miles southeast of here, for Ronald B. Levinson, philosophy professor at the university, who has been missing since Sunday.

REMOVAL OF GLOVER URGED IN CONGRESS

Norris and Others Assail Assistant Postmaster for Hoover Speech.

(Associated Press.)

Demands for the removal of W. Irving Glover, Second Assistant Postmaster General, echoed in both Houses of Congress yesterday from his order to Missouri postmasters to work for President Hoover's reelection.

Glover's dismissal was asked in the Senate by Senator Norris, Republican independent of Nebraska, and in the House by Representative Fulbright (Democrat), Missouri. Other Democrats in both houses assailed his speech to the Missouri postmasters' convention.

Republican leaders remained silent in the face of the attacks. No one attempted to defend him in the Senate, but in the House, Representative Dyer (Republican), Missouri, contended Glover was not urging the postmasters to support Hoover's reelection, but merely asking them to "support him in these days and times."

Meanwhile Glover stuck to his guns and asserted "I had a perfect right to tell the postmasters to work for Mr. Hoover if I wanted to."

Glover said he was correctly quoted in urging the postmasters to "go out on the firing line" for President Hoover's reelection, and telling them if they did they were filling their jobs.

Only presidentially appointed postmasters were present, Glover said, contending there was no law forbidding them to work for the reelection of the man who appointed them.

Norris asked for the immediate dismissal of Glover and a repudiation of his statement from President Hoover.

"If the President wants to retain the confidence of the patriotic people of the country," Norris said, "he will

Boys Rescue 25 Horses As 6 Die in Stable Fire

Point-to-Point Riding School at Forty-fifth and Lowell Streets Is Razed by Flames; Glow Visible in Adjoining States.

Two youthful stable boys early today risked their lives to save the fine horses under their care at the Point to Point Riding School, Forty-fifth and Lowelll streets northwest, when a fire broke out in the stables shortly after midnight. Despite their best efforts, six of the 31 blooded horses quartered there are believed to have burned to death in the blazing frame building, and some of the others were seriously injured.

Warner Moxley and Burl Jenkins, both 18 years old, were the heroes of the fire. They are employed as stable boys by J. C. Love, owner of the riding school, and live at his home, which is about 100 yards from the building which housed the offices of the school, stalls for the 31 horses and the equipment of the school.

Their room faces the stable. They were awakened shortly after midnight by the glare of the flames which had broken out in the upper end of the building. Hastily donning a few clothes, they ran to the building and started their task of rescuing their charges.

In most instances they were forced to drag the panic-stricken beasts out by main strength. As soon as a horse was got to the door of the stables, he was given a smart spank on the flanks and the two youths returned to the blazing building in an attempt to rescue another mount. Many of the rescued horses were wandering loose in the Wesley Heights section this morning.

Rapidly the fire worked its way down from the upper end of the building. The boys worked frantically against time, and at last it became too hot for them to return inside the building. Regretfully they ran to safety and saw the roof of the building collapse on the fine animals left inside.

Three American University students and Private C. W. Peters, of the Eighth Precinct, aided in the rescue work at the latter stages. Lee Field,

'Joyriding Federal Judges' Are Assailed by LaGuardia

O'Connor Says Members of Bench Have Waiting List to Sit in New York and Enjoy Night Life at United States Expense.

(Associated Press.)

Vacationing in New York at Government expense was charged to Federal judges yesterday by Representative LaGuardia (Republican), New York.

"I want to call the attention of the House to judicial joy riding," the New Yorker told the House.

He submitted a report from the Comptroller General containing 29 names of Federal judges who visited the Southern District of New York at Federal expense in the last two years. The total was $27,025, spent for transportation and subsistence.

Many prominent jurists from all parts of the country were included in the list. It showed they served from one day up to about 30 at a stretch on the bench in the Southern District.

"I have here a report from the Comptroller General for the last two years showing that these judges—and I have only taken one district, which is the Southern District of New York—come to New York, travel, sit a few days, go home, charge up their traveling expenses, come back and sit for a few days more," LaGuardia said, adding:

"This will show that some judges run up extra pay annually by sitting in the Southern District of New York. Here is a case where a judge came all the way from California to the City of New York, stayed for a few days and charged his per diem and travel allowance all the way from California to New York and back."

"The remedy is," he said, "when an extra judge is required, for that judge to go to the District of New York and stay there until the work is finished."

Interrupting, Representative O'Connor (Democrat), New York, said, "It is commonly stated around the court building that these judges do not come from California to New York

GARNER AGAIN RAPS ATTITUDE OF HOOVER

(Associated Press.)

Offering to buy a new hat for any one who finds that President Hoover has not contradicted himself in any ten-day period for the last six months, Speaker Garner declared yesterday that as long as Mr. Hoover remains in the White House "the people of this country" will lack confidence.

The Texan spoke up again critically of the Chief Executive in a press conference, after his attention had been directed to the statement Sunday by Senator Moses (Republican), New Hampshire, assailing one by him Saturday in which the Democrat contended Mr. Hoover has "frozen the confidence" of the people.

Senator Moses has counseled that if Mr. Garner wants to help the country, he should "forget for a time that he is candidate for the Presidency, to remember that he is Speaker of the House and from that lofty position to make a public declaration that he and his followers in the House would give support and cooperation in the early completion of the remaining part of the construction program of the President."

Declares Truth Effective.

Seemingly hit by Senator Moses' utterance which included a charge that his leadership had "burned out," the Speaker yesterday arched his long white eyebrows and rejoined:

"The President sent for the distinguished author of the 'sons of the wild jackass' to defend him.

"It must have gotten under somebody's skin. The truth is pretty effective."

He conjectured that Senator Moses had used an old trick of lawyers, "confession by avoidance," and explained that Senator Moses "admitted what I said about the President was the truth, but then said, 'Well, look at yourself.'"

Recalling that the Democratic House had put through all of Mr. Hoover's important emergency legislation, including the moratorium, the reconstruction corporation and a $1,000,000,000 tax bill, Mr. Garner expressed the view that the President "received better cooperation than he would have if the Republicans had been in control."

Contradictions Are Charged.

Referring to President Hoover's request for $20,000,000 in additional appropriations received over the week-end by the House, Mr. Garner said:

"The President says on one hand not to spend any more money and then on the other hand sends messages to Congress asking for appropriations of millions of dollars.

"One day he says 'build public buildings to relieve unemployment,' and the next day he says 'don't issue any more bonds.' His statements are contradictory.

"You can take the newspapers for the last six months and in any ten-day period you select you will find the President had contradicted himself. If you don't, I'll buy you a new hat.

"Any man who talks as much as Mr. Hoover is bound to make some contradictory statements."

Princeton Clubs Honor Two Washington Youths

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, May 16.—Raymond H. Carter and Phillips Smith, both of Washington, were honored when the election of officers of the eighteen upper class eating clubs of Princeton University was announced here today.

Carter and Smith, both members of class '33, were elected, respectively, president of the Court Club and vice president of Dial Lodge, two of the most exclusive on the campus. The Washington youths share honors with the varsity football captain-elect, Frederick T. Billings, jr., of Pittsburgh, who was elected governor of the Ivy Club. Since Princeton has no Greek letter fraternities, private eating clubs, membership in which are recognized as selective, represent social activities of the campus. These upper class clubs just completed their climatic event of the season, the annual week-end house party, attended by debutantes and socially prominent girls from all parts of the country.

Vessel Is Total Loss.

When the last rescue vessels reached the scene they reported all passengers and members of the crew had abandoned ship and that the Georges Phillipar was still burning—a total loss.

There was no complete passenger and crew list available. It was understood several high colonial officials of France were on the vessel, en route home from China.

The Georges Phillipar, valued at 120,000,000 francs (about $4,800,000), left Marseilles on her maiden trip February 26. She was capable of 17 knots and especially built for tropical travel. Capt. Vicq has the longest service record of any officer of the line.

Forecast of Trouble.

Marseille, France, May 16 (A.P.).—The surete generale, the French "Scotland Yard," revealed tonight that trouble had been forecast mysteriously for the French liner Georges Phillipar before its maiden voyage that ended in destruction of the ship by fire off Somaliland today.

The vessel was searched and watched closely before it sailed for Yokohama as a result of rumors at her dock here that trouble awaited her. Two detectives of the surete generale searched the boat, but discovered nothing.

She was rushed through the Suez Canal, leaving Port Said ahead of schedule, the surete office said. Pierre Pasquier, governor general of Indo-China, was scheduled to board the ship at Saigon for Marseille, but canceled his passage at the last moment.

Among the 170 passengers embarking at Saigon, however, was M. Habert, director of justice in Indo-China; a banker named Spilman and a man believed to be Albert Londres, noted journalist. Many others were French officers and soldiers returning home.

Wets Dance With Beers In the Eyes as Drys Cry

By JOHN J. DALY

BY this time the populace of the world is making the painful discovery that we are all in a fight—the battle for existence, the skirmish for social prestige, the war for fame and fortune, place and power.

All hands are at it—from the man with the ladder and the hose, fighting fire, to the politicians fighting for their political life, in the battle of the votes.

The line-up is a magnificent array: Forces of law and order fighting against the underworld, good battling the bad, the poor against the rich, the proud walking over the humble, the professions against industry, the arts vs. commercialism, and so on down the line, all showing no quarter.

Now comes the drys with the complaint they are fighting with their backs against the wall. They are lucky, of course, to have the wall.

* * * *

PROF. GEORGE CROFT CELL, of Boston University, issuing a call for a new revitalized crusade on behalf of bigger and better living, a charge on the bulwarks of beer, booze and buncombe, cries:

"The wets have surpassed us in thought and strategy for the past decade. They have outthought us, outgeneraled us, and outfought us. We may not witness the political debacle of the temperance movement, we may not lose the legal and constitutional bulwarks, but right now there is the greatest danger of it—far greater than we know."

As the battle rages, some 35 States are up in arms against the prohibition law, so the professor says, the remaining States—13 in number—fighting to keep prohibition on the Federal statute books.

* * * *

THE situation is not as bad as the drys seem to think, for these 13 States can always veto repeal. They are, as the professor points out, "of tremendous strategic importance;" but that is not enough, he opines. The dry crusaders, in all the States of the Union, must realize that the boys on the other side of the lines are harnessing up the brewers' big horses. The first real onslaught was the Beer Parade down Broadway, led by that grand marshal of grand marshals, the Hon. James J. Walker, Mayor of Greater New York—a city that has no more use for prohibition than a Mexican peon has for a shower bath.

So the good professor asks this question:

"Suppose the 13 States can always veto repeal? How much virtue will that veto have in it once the outlawry of the alcoholic drink business has ceased to be the majority opinion of the American people?"

How much?

And there is, again, that stone wall up against which are the backs of a mighty host fighting for life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

Verily, the drys are fighting with their backs against the wall; but what, you might ask, are the wets doing? Well, the wets, in their febrile fashion, it would seem, are dancing with beers in their eyes.

SENATE CHIEFS BEAT PLAN OF COUZENS TO HIKE SURTAX

the night session into which leaders plunged the Senate yesterday. Earlier in the day Senator Millard Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, had sought agreement on a debate-limiting rule.

Senator Huey Long (Democrat), of Louisiana, objected to the first motion by Senator Tydings and he demonstrated his objection to the motion of Senator Harrison by taking the floor and talking admittedly to kill time if that was all he could do. Senator James E. Watson (Republican), of Indiana, majority leader, made a brief plea that Senator Long be reasonable and not seek to take undue advantage of the power of time in view of the general situation. But Senator Long, who didn't get to be "kingfish" of Louisiana politics by listening to such pleas, refused to exhibit the kind of reasonableness Senator Watson obviously thought constituted reasonableness and talked on.

Strange Contrasts in Debate.

The debate on the amendments to increase the income tax rates above the committee schedule presented some strange contrasts. The committee's normal tax rates are 3 per cent on the first $4,000 net income, 6 per cent on the next $4,000 and 9 per cent above $8,000. The maximum surtaxes imposed in the bill before the Senate are 45 per cent on incomes above $1,000,000. Lined up with the richest man in the Senate, Mr. Couzens, were men whose political creed has been to fight for the little fellow and who haven't had time—or willingness—to amass material fortunes.

Decision on the Couzens amendment came after one or two side excursions which nobody took very seriously. Senator Park Trammell (Democrat), Florida, proposed to amend the Couzens schedule so that the normal tax would begin at 3 per cent on $4,000 incomes, go to 6 per cent on those between $4,000 and $6,000 and only reached 12 per cent above $6,000. That amendment was voted down, 76 to 4. Senator John H. Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, whose beetling brows and pugnacious countenance seem to give portent to most anything he proposes, offered another amendment to the Couzens amendment. Mr. Bankhead wanted the proposed heavier rate imposed only on incomes over $24,000. He withdrew it before a vote was had.

Borah Supports Couzens.

Sponsored as a panacea for the existing economic—sometimes called business—ills of the Nation, it was only natural that the debate should enter other than purely tax fields. Senator Couzens, it will be recalled, offered to give $1,000,000 in cash if all the other residents of the City of Detroit would raise $9,000,000 more to help the needy.

Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, looked on by some as the apostle of political liberalism but damned by others as weak in the pinches, demanded acceptance of the Couzens amendment. Its adoption, Senator Borah said, would mean money enough in the Treasury to permit the Federal Government to do some of the things it should do about relieving the distress of individuals who are suffering between the upper and nether economic millstone.

Senator Borah made a speech. Possessed of a fine voice, he made the farthermost corners of the Senate chamber ring with his statement that "this is war," in demanding extraordinary relief action. The proposed taxation was drastic but not more so than seemed necessary, the senator said.

"It is necessary that we call on those who have means so that we will have the means with which to do the things necessary to be done," Senator Borah said. "We can not longer expect local communities to deal with a situation which is not local but national and which must be handled as a national problem."

Harrison Defends Bill.

Senator Harrison, talking against the Couzens amendment as the first hole in the committee-bill dike, warned that "you who are talking about smiting the rich want to remember there are things in this bill which strike the rich as never before." The Mississippian took exception to descriptions of the bill as having a low maximum. Its provisions, he said, would take in taxation as much as 54 per cent of large incomes.

Senator Robert M. La Follette (Republican), of Wisconsin, also jumped into the fight for the high taxes proposed by Couzens. It was a question purely of taxing those best able to pay, Senator La Follette said, and, if the higher rates were not imposed it would mean that additional taxes would have to be imposed within the year.

Senator David A. Reed (Republican), of Pennsylvania, joined in the demand of the leaders that the Couzens amendment be rejected. A few hours later he was one of the central figures in a sarcastic speech by Senator Hiram Johnson (Republican), of California.

Protests From California.

With serious mien and no exaggeration in his voice or manner, Senator Johnson said he had received 11,753 telegrams of protest from residents of California, against the reduction in the exemption in admission taxes. He had, he said, received 28,764 other telegrams of protest against other provisions of the bill. He was grateful to Senator Connally for his description of the manner in which Secretary Mills had come before the finance committee and forced it to rewrite its own bill, Senator Couzens suggested that the situation was even worse than Senator Connally had suggested and the Texan had been trying to be too kind to everybody concerned in responding to questions.

"I want these Californians who have sent me messages to know who is responsible for these provisions," Senator Johnson said. "I want them to know that my answer to their inquiries and protests is given here and now. This bill is the bill sponsored and insisted upon by the Secretary of the Treasury and the President of the United States. I want all Californians to understand that.

Blames European Moratorium.

"There has been much talk about standing by the committee bill. I say that if we voted against the income tax provisions of this bill we would be standing by the committee, which only the day before Secretary Mills appeared and 'browbeat' the committee into accepting his schedule had approved the income tax schedule which is incorporated in the amendment of the senator from Texas.

"I want the people of California to know that the reason why they are going to be called on to bear these increased taxes is because we gave $250,000,000 to Europe through the moratorium last year. I want them to know that there is little prospect that the $270,000,000 due this country this year will be paid. That is more than half of the total it is proposed to raise by this extraordinary tax bill. I want the people of California to know that we are going to give to European countries more than half of the total of this bill but we are going to tax a man with 10 cents to send his little child to the moving picture theater for a few moments of amusement and forgetfulness of the drab realities."

Mills' Tactics Described.

Senator Johnson's attack on the bill as having been forced down the committee's throat followed a description of the last session of the committee at which Secretary Mills appeared. Senator George W. Norris (Republican), of Nebraska, had drawn the story out of Senator Connally. The Texan went to great pains to make clear he had no criticism of the motives of the older members of the finance committee. But what he said justified newspaper reports that Mr. Mills had appeared before the committee and whipped it into rewriting the bill it had decided on. Mr. Mills, the senator admitted, had "strongly and vigorously insisted" on changing the income tax sections. He had "rushed up here" and insisted that the committee accept his proposal as the tax program of the President and the administration.

"The result was that members of the committee who were given to understand that the administration was insisting on the tax bill in that form gave in," Senator Connally said. "It was a makeshift. It was a hodgepodge and nobody wanted to be responsible for it. Committee members felt that if we abided by our committee decisions it probably would mean a fight with the Treasury, the President and the whole administration, and if the President wanted to take responsibility for the program insisted on by Mr. Mills the committee ought to accept that program. But there were some of us who served notice that we should carry our fight outside the committee."

Prison Firearms Bill Passed.

(Associated Press.)

Last year's prison break at Leavenworth Penitentiary led to House approval yesterday of the Sumners' bill fixing a maximum penalty of life imprisonment for guards who assist in smuggling firearms into Federal prisons.

HOUSE PASSES BILL TO AID CREDIT BANKS

(Associated Press.)

Legislation to enlarge resources of the Federal intermediate credit banks was added by the House yesterday to the vital banking enactments sent to President Hoover this session.

Speaker Garner recognized Chairman Steagall, of the banking committee, to call up the Senate bill under a suspension of the rules. After 40 minutes' debate it was passed by the required two-thirds majority.

Representative McFadden, ranking Republican on the banking group, was the only opposition spokesman. The Pennsylvanian said he did not oppose making direct loan notes of the credit banks discountable by the Federal Reserve System, but was "opposed to the issue of Federal Reserve notes on the security of intermediate credit bank obligations."

Chief Provisions in Bill.

Chief provisions in the bill, indorsed alike by Treasury and Reserve Board officials, would:

1. Amend the reserve act by making notes representing direct advances by the credit banks of not over nine months maturity, discountable;

2. Amend the reserve act to make collateral trust debentures of the credit banks acceptable security for fifteen-day borrowings by Federal Reserve member banks.

Andrew W. Mellon, who recommended the bill while Secretary of the Treasury, said regarding this provision:

"These are high-grade investments and member banks would purchase them in greater volume if they could be used as a basis for temporary credit with the Federal Reserve Bank in the event of some emergency or need of funds. It is believed they would not be used in this manner to an great extent. * * *

Feared Undermining Dollar.

Mr. McFadden charged this provision would further 'undermine confidence in the dollar."

Other provisions in the bill, which is intended to cheapen interest costs to farmers, include:

Acceptance by the credit banks of drafts and bills of exchange drawn by agricultural cooperatives.

Authorization for the Farm Loan Board to assess credit banks to restore capital of any bank in the system whose credit is impaired.

Payment into the credit bank surpluses of 50 per cent of the net earnings instead of 10 per cent, as at present.

Shortridge Backs Rum Referendum

California Senator Says People Should Have Voice on Change.

(Associated Press.)

Senator Shortridge (Republican), California, yesterday said he favors "giving the people opportunity to exercise their right to modify or alter or repeal the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution."

Shortridge has voted for enforcement measures, including the Jones "five and ten" law increasing the penalties for Volstead act violators. He comes up for reelection this year.

"My views," he set forth in a formal statement, "are in entire harmony with the public policy of California, whose people have provided in their State constitution for the initiative and the referendum. Under our California constitution the people may initiate a law to be adopted by vote of the people, or compel a referendum on law to be adopted or rejected by vote of the people. * * *

"While the eighteenth amendment remains a part of the Constitution of the United States it must be upheld."

Two Crow Eggs Hatch In Pocket; Bounty Paid

Emporia, Kans., May 16 (A.P.).—With two crow eggs in a pocket, E. E. Peet, farmer, drove toward the county clerk's office.

It was a very warm day.

"I'm sorry," said the deputy clerk, "but we don't pay bounty on crow's eggs—just on crow heads."

"Well, you can have the eggs anyway," Peet responded, and put a hand in the pocket. A look of astonishment crossed his face.

He collected 20 cents bounty—10 cents on each crow.

U. S. RESERVE BANK HEADS MEET TODAY

(Associated Press.)

Economic conditions of the country are expected to be reviewed today when the governors of the twelve Federal Reserve Banks meet here with the Federal Reserve Board.

No official of the board would venture a prediction of what the governors would discuss. They meet in Washington frequently and confer on questions affecting the Federal Reserve System. They held their last session about a month ago.

It was assumed the action of the Federal Reserve Banks in buying Government securities would be one of the subjects under discussion. For five weeks the banks have bought an average of about $100,000,000 in Government securities weekly in efforts to relieve conditions. The governors now constitute the open market committee of the Federal Reserve System, and their decision on any action affecting the sale or purchase of securities probably would be adopted.

George L. Harrison, governor of the New York bank, visited with Secretary Mills briefly yesterday.

The weekly report of the Federal Reserve Board yesterday showed loans made by reporting member banks had decreased $125,000,000 in the last week to $11,717,000,000, while holdings of United States securities by them declined $19,000,000 to $4,144,000,000. Loans on securities decreased $86,000,000 to a total of $4,977,000,000, and other loans dropped off $39,000,000 to $6,740,000,000.

The banks reported that net demand deposits increased $64,000,000 in the week to $11,146,000,000, which was $2,631,000,000 less than a year ago. Time deposits increased $4,000,000 to $5,709,000,000, which was $1,889,000,000 less than the amount of time deposits on the same date last year.

West Virginia's Permits For Alcohol Are Upheld

(Associated Press.)

Manufacturers of extracts, perfumery, medicines and other products which contain ethyl alcohol under Federal permits can be required to obtain State permits and to pay license fees before taking into West Virginia any products which have been listed as intoxicating liquor by the State Prohibition Commission.

The Supreme Court delivered the ruling yesterday in setting aside the contention of McCormick & Co., Inc., of Baltimore, and Durham Bros., Inc., of Roanoke, Va., that permits and license fees required by West Virginia operated as an illegal burden on interstate commerce.

Bill Urges 2 Per Cent Veteran Loan Interest

(Associated Press.)

Limitation to 2 per cent of interests charged on loans to veterans on their adjusted service certificates was sought yesterday in a bill submitted by Senator Morrison (Democrat) of North Carolina.

ECONOMISTS FAVOR BIG U. S. BOND ISSUE

(Associated Press.)

Strong support for a Federal bond issue to finance a gigantic public construction program came yesterday from a group of economists, college professors, and business men as Senate Democrats prepared their new program for unemployment relief.

Senator Wagner, chairman of the committee in charge of drafting the Democratic program, announced he had received an overwhelmingly favorable response to a questionnaire he sent out on his bill, proposing a $1,100,000,000 bond issue to finance public works already authorized.

Wagner made the responses public as his committee prepared to meet to consider a compromise relief bill he has drafted, the keynote of which is a public construction program.

"Remarkable Symposium."

"The replies," Wagner said in offering the responses to the Senate, "constitute a remarkable symposium on that question, which is at the present time being actively considered throughout the country.

"It is a compromise statement of the carefully considered view of the men who, by training and experience, have a right to be heard on the subject."

Among the scores of economists and others who replied favorably to Wagner's questionnaire were the following: Spurgeon Bell, of Ohio State University; John B. Canning, of Stanford University; W. J. Couper, deputy commissioner of labor, Connecticut; Felix Frankfurter, of Harvard University; Earl Dean Howard, of Northwestern University; Francis B. Sayre, of Harvard; Edwin R. A. Seligman, of Columbia, and F. W. Taussig, of Harvard.

E. F. Albertsworth, of Northwestern University, replied that "If we are to stave off revolution we must act promptly and wisely to provide employment and revive industry in general."

Irving Fisher Dissents.

One of the few dissenting views was received from Irving Fisher, of Yale University, who said the proposal would take too long to give the immediate relief which is needed.

"I quite agree that the situation is extremely dangerous and ominous," he said.

"I think I would even go further and say that we are on the very brink.

"My only reason for optimism is that my visits in Washington have convinced me that Congress is alive to the danger and will do what is necessary for reflation and stabilization."

Wagner completed yesterday the tentative draft of a relief bill which he will submit to the Democratic committee, running well over $2,000,000,000.

U. S. IMPORTS VALUE BUT LITTLE CHANGED

(Associated Press.)

Relatively little difference with respect to changes in the total value of imports into the United States between countries on the gold standard and those that have left it was reported to Congress yesterday by the Tariff Commission.

The report, requested upon resolution of Senator Reed (Republican), Pennsylvania, was received as the House ways and means committee closed a third day of hearings on the Hawley bill for an adjustment of tariff rates to compensate for depreciated foreign currencies. Pulpwood and lumber spokesmen, urging passage of the measure, were the chief witnesses.

Meanwhile, the support of President Hoover for legislation to compensate through tariff adjustments for depreciation in foreign currency was sought by Senator Schall and Representative Knutson, both Minnesota Republicans.

Senator Schall said he had told the Chief Executive that decreases in the value of foreign moneys in many instances had made American tariff protection on many commodities too low, and asserted specifically that sufficient protection was not being given domestic pulp wood production.

The tariff commission reported that during the October-February period of 1931, the dollar value of imports from six leading European countries off the gold standard declined 28 per cent from the corresponding period of the preceding year, while the decline was only 23 per cent for six leading European countries retaining the gold standard.

PLANS TO RAISE CAMPAIGN FUNDS DISCUSSED BY G. O. P.

port filed with Congress, spent $478,000 to aid the party headed by the wet Alfred E. Smith.

Practical politicians, looking at the matter from an unemotional standpoint, feel that it will be much more profitable for a party to take a liberal stand on prohibition this year. The money, they say, has shifted from the dry to the wet side.

Yesterday's conference with President Hoover was attended by Senator Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio, chairman of the Republican national committee; Postmaster General Walter Brown, who is expected to succeed Fess as chairman; James Francis Burke, general counsel of the committee; Joseph R. Nutt, treasurer; Jeremiah Milbank, Eastern treasurer, and George Deb. Keim, secretary.

Treasurer Nutt said that the discussion was confined to party finances. At present, he said, the party had only enough money to meet current expenses for a "short time." He said he would have a plan later for raising a campaign fund after the Chicago convention.

Hoover Confers With Ingalls.

Earlier in the day, President Hoover conferred with Assistant Secretary of the Navy David S. Ingalls, who last week won the Republican nomination for Governor in Ohio. Ingalls, running on an outright repeal platform, defeated two men indorsed by the Antisaloon League.

Representative Fred Britten (Republican), of Illinois, said yesterday that he was certain a resubmission plank would be inserted in the Republican platform next month at Chicago.

"I am as certain as it is possible to be that President Hoover is going to run on a resubmission plank," said Britten.

He made the statement in urging passage of the bill to legalize and tax beer.

The Democrats have the jump on the Republicans this year in the matter of a war chest. Their drive for a "victory fund" has been on now for several months and, according to reports, has been highly successful.

The sum which is being sought—$1,500,000—would be used to pay back Chairman John J. Raskob, to pay current expenses, and to provide a "flying start" fund after the convention.

The announcement of Owen D. Young yesterday that he "definitely and finally" was out of the running for the Democratic presidential nomination will be a blow to some Eastern Democrats who were thinking in terms of campaign funds.

These Democrats believed that Mr. Young would inspire a larger fund than any man who has been mentioned for the nomination.

The general impression here was that Mr. Young, in saying that he was not a candidate, meant just that. It is understood that the state of Mrs. Young's health is one reason he is loath to get into a political fight. The news of Mr. Young's withdrawal, if it could properly be called that, occasioned considerable talk at the Capitol, where the impression has been gaining that Mr. Young was the hope of the "stop-Roosevelt" forces.

Dill Discounts Opposition.

"I don't think it makes any great difference," said Senator Clarence C. Dill, of Washington. "Roosevelt is steadily going forward toward a majority on the first ballot and I think when he gets that this 'stop' talk will be futile."

Senator Marcus Coolidge, of Massachusetts, a supporter of Alfred E. Smith, said he didn't think Young's announcement changed the situation very much.

None of the senators seemed to think that Young's action would make any difference in Smith's seeming determination to head off the man who called him "Happy Warrior."

MANKIND

What Grace, what loveliness. Ye Gods how rare.
Words—Words to tell and Verses for my praise
And Melodies sweet and Voices for my Lays.

And Jove His Lightning cometh thru the Cloud,
Bright are the Flashes and His Voice is loud
And Bolts and Bolts upon the Earth are hurled—
They tell of Power beyond—to this vile world.

And hither longing we had come to dwell,
But now in Duty are we forced to tell
That not in any Race—the Human Kind—
Not one true Mortal shall we ever find:
Can ne'er be trusted—He is but a Rake—
Part Man, part Monkey, part Lion and part Snake.

A Mongrel ever, it is all His Aim,
Bee, borrow, steal—the Dollar is His Game;
And well we Know, for we have placed it there
To tempt to lure to win Him with its glare

That He can play in every earthly Stunt,
From largest Giant—to the smallest Runt.
Indeed today—the Circus is in Town
And His will be—the Leader and the Clown—

Whilst ever sad the Funeral it trends—
The Pastor, Sexton, Casket and the Friends
And we in Sympathy stand apart—
Ready to share—and t' serve each broken Heart—

Yet wonder, too, and strange—these Hearts so sore,
Should grieve that Silence is—and Tumult's o'er.

For now our Lives—our Bodies are at rest—
In Raptures are—away among the Blest;
Where, now unheard—the Din of earthly Crowds—
We join the Heavenly Throngs beyond the Clouds:

Where nevermore the Cares of Worldly Strife—
We are in Realms of Bliss—a Newer Life—
And glad our Voices—we do ever raise
In songs of Joy and Love, and Hymns of Praise.

THE END

Forget the many who have gone afar
And better love and serve the few that are;
They were as bits of sunshine in the past
But these have come to comfort us at last.
Why should we pine and grieve days that are fled
And gaze upon the Portraits of the dead?
They rest with Mother Earth whilst we in open air
Do feast our eyes upon a world most fair
To revel in the Sunlight with the merry wind
Yet know He can both cruel be and kind.

Our Hearts in ecstasies and our minds as well
To feel its Power and its Beauty tell;
A turn 'tis day— a turn and it is night.
The Beauteous Seasons in their wonted train
And glorious Summers they are here again
And yet we weary of the journey long,
Our feeble trend amidst the passing throng.

And Hope, the fairest, lingering at the Gate
We note the deepening shadows on our way—
Our time is brief—we can not longer stay—

A throb, a sigh and quick our Harps are hung
And we are gone—unheralded, unsung—
With Death to greet us in His awful might—
He tells another Day—a longer Flight—
Eternity itself—to be the Goal
That tempts the travail of the time-worn Soul.

Thru deep and slumbrous Clouds our course and soon
We are in all the wonders of the moon.
Fair Hills and Dales and Meadows painted new.
The Rivers wide, the mountains in the West;
The Heavens aglow, their Welcome to the Blest;
And glad our voices with the Angels blend

MT. M'KINLEY TREK FATAL TO TWO MEN

Scientists Killed by Fall Into Crevasse on Highest Peak in North America.

Fairbanks, Alaska, May 16 (A.P.).—An expedition to "trap" the cosmic ray on Mount McKinley, highest peak on the North American continent, ended in the death of Allen Carpe, 36, New York engineer, and Theodore Koven, 28, a member of his party.

Word of their fate was telephoned here today by Harry J. Leik, superintendent of Mount McKinley National Park, who, with A. D. Lindley, of Minneapolis, and two others, was returning from the first scaling of both peaks of the huge mountain, and the first successful climb of the south peak of McKinley since that of Archdeacon Hudson Stuck and Harry Karstens in 1913.

The superintendent said Koven apparently had fallen into a crevasse and climbed out again, despite serious injuries, but died of exposure. Carpe also fell into the crevasse, he said, but his body was not found.

Ranger Is Injured.

An attempt was made to carry Koven's body down the mountain. This was abandoned after Ranger Grant Pearson fell 40 feet and was injured.

Lower down on the peak, the Leik-Lindley party met E. P. Beckwith and Percy T. Olton, jr., who with Nicholas Spadevecckis, were landed on Muldrow Glacier early this month to join Carpe and Koven in the expedition to measure the cosmic ray. All three are from New York.

Beckwith was reported ill with a high fever. Spadevecckis had left for Fairbanks to request an airplane to fly in and get Beckwith, but he is now four days overdue.

Plane Made Ready.

A plane is to leave for here as soon as a place can be found for it to take off on skiis, which are necessary for landing on the glacier.

The Leik party left a tube containing names of the members and notes of their trip in a sheltered spot below the summit of the south peak.

The group found thermometers left by Archdeacon Stuck which recorded minimum temperatures of 95 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit. Mount McKinley is 20,300 feet high.

ANTICRIME FORCES UNIFIED IN CHICAGO

Coordination of Activity Is Expected to Aid Suburban Communities.

Chicago, May 16 (A.P.).—A super police force, coordinating activities of suburban constabularies and bringing under a single head one of the world's largest law-enforcement bodies, was created today in Chicago, laboratory of anticrime methods.

The modus operandi of the organization was outlined before police chiefs of Cook County's numerous towns, meeting at the behest of State's Attorney John A. Swanson, who sponsored the plan. Accorded enthusiastic support, it will go into operation immediately.

The controlling and unifying head of the force will be the police of the State's attorney's office, directed by Lieut. John M. Leonard, who was appointed last week chief assistant to Investigator Pat Roche. Roche in turn will be relieved of office routine to operate in field investigation.

Suburban police, State's Attorney Swanson explained, will serve as auxiliary State's attorney police, with jurisdiction in all parts of Cook County. The result will be a unified group with a personnel of approximately 7,000.

Advantages of the system, Swanson said, will be manifold. The new force, in addition to being numerically superior, will have elasticity of jurisdiction, mobility of operation, and will be able to utilize metropolitan methods in the detection and apprehension of criminals.

"We'll make fingerprint experts of every community constable in the county," he said.

The benefits of the system will be wholly reciprocal, Swanson said. With policemen in outlying communities serving as intermediaries, serving papers and making arrests, the appearance of lawbreakers into court will be greatly expedited.

"Should Cook County's plan prove successful—and there is no reason that it should not," said Swanson, "other metropolitan regions would profit by creating similar organizations."

terday the remainder also objected to the proposal.

"We believe the war debt plan in question to be hastily conceived and unsound in principle," his statement said. "We first offered it primarily as part of a faction dispute in one of the major political parties."

The six representatives present yesterday asserted, however, that they shared the opinion expressed last Friday by the opposition group that "economic conditions in the country today call for immediate constructive action on the part of the Federal Government."

The six groups represented yesterday were the Brotherhoods of Locomotive Engineers; Railway Carmen, Firemen and Oilers; Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers; Express and Station Employes; Machinists, and the Sheet Metal Workers.

ANALOSTAN ISLAND'S BILL WAITS SIGNING

Roosevelt Memorial Group's Gift for Park Accepted by House.

The House yesterday voted to accept the Roosevelt Memorial Association's gift of Analostan Island in the Potomac as a permanent memorial to the late President. The bill, which has passed the Senate, was sent to the White House for signature.

The 90-acre island, still in its natural state, would be kept in its rustic condition, under National Capital Park and Planning Commission supervision.

Foot bridges would be built to the island, but nothing of a monumental character erected, out of harmony with the present natural surroundings, Representative Robert Luce (Republican), Massachusetts, explained.

He said there would be suitable walks and approaches, with such simple structures as are necessary for public convenience.

"This," he said, "should make it a welcome addition to the park system of the Capital, bringing to all who dwell or visit here one more opportunity for enjoyment, preserving a beautiful spot that might otherwise have been blighted by business, and fittingly testifying to the esteem in which was held one of our most beloved Presidents."

OIL-TANK ARSONIST SHOOTS SELF DEAD

European's Outrage in Argentina Held Part of Vast Red Conspiracy.

Bahia Blanca, Argentina, May 16 (A.P.).—A European, identified only as Ladislao Maiajoy, today set fire to a government-owned petroleum tank containing 6,500 tons of oil in the Plaza Huincul field and then shot and killed himself.

Late tonight the damage was estimated at $175,000, after the tank had exploded and the fire was brought under control.

The arson was linked with a similar fire in the same oil fields, which are controlled by the government company operating in that part of the pampas.

A Communist plot of vast ramifications was charged by the authorities, although they admitted they were as yet unable to give details.

Sao Paulo Guarded in Strike.

Sao Paulo, Brazil, May 16 (U.P.).—Sao Paulo was under heavy guard and business activities were almost paralyzed tonight as the strike, which began a week ago when railroad workers walked out demanding shorter hours and more pay slowly developed into a general strike. Shoemakers, hotel employes, bakers, glaziers and textile workers have already joined the strike, which was the indirect result of a decree by Provisional President Getulio Vargas providing for a 48-hour week for all workers in Brazil.

Paraguay Charges Bolivian Flights.

Asuncion, Paraguay, May 16 (U.P.).—Bolivian army planes have been seen twice flying over Paraguayan forts in the disputed Chaco territory between Bolivia and Paraguay, the foreign minister informed the United Press today. Information concerning the flights was not published locally. The Paraguayan government, it was learned reliably, has informed the five neutral nations endeavoring to arbitrate the territory dispute and has requested them to take measures to insure discontinuance of such flights.

City at the request of the New York judges."

"There is a standing waiting list for a chance to come to New York for a vacation, to go to the theater, and to go to the night clubs," he added. "That is well known."

LaGuardia's statement said Judge Clarence C. Galston, of Brooklyn, N. Y., received $50 subsistence allowances for sitting on the bench in New York City five days and that Circuit Judge Thomas W. Swan, of New Haven, received $5,800, and Circuit Judge Harrie B. Chase, of Brattleboro, Vt., $4,233 during the period covered by the report.

Among those listed by LaGuardia were Judge T. Blake Kennedy, Cheyenne, Wyo., $1,429; Judge Paul J. McCormick, Los Angeles, Calif., $1,443; Halsted L. Ridder, of Miami, Fla., $425; A. P. St. Sure, San Francisco, $757; J. Foster Symes, Denver, Colo., $448; Julian W. Mack, Chicago, $1,140; Robert T. Ervin, Mobile, Ala., $552; Thomas W. Swan, New Haven, Conn., $5,800; Harrie B. Hutcheson, jr., Houston, Tex., $440.

The judges receive $10 a day for subsistence in addition to their transportation with many of them serving from only two to ten days at a time in New York.

Revenue Bill Criticized By Investment Bankers

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., May 16 (A.P.).—The capital gains and losses provisions of the revenue bill now pending in the Senate were criticized today in a report of the board of governors of the Investment Bankers Association of America.

The association's Federal taxation committee stressed particularly what it said was the bill's tendency to prevent sales in a high market and to increase sales for tax losses in a low market. It asserted this would add to inflation in prosperous periods and accentuate deflation in bad times.

DRYS PLAN TO FIGHT LIQUOR REFERENDUM

Dr. Clarence Wilson Cites Smith's Defeat as Point for Prohibition.

Atlantic City, N. J., May 16 (A.P.).—An assertion that the defeat in 1928 of Alfred E. Smith for President was "the best referendum that can ever be devised" on prohibition was made tonight by Dr. Clarence True Wilson.

Speaking before the quadrennial temperance and prohibition rally of the Methodist General Conference at which a letter from Henry Ford indorsing prohibition was read, Dr. Wilson said: "The Drys should insist that there shall be no referendum on this question until the wets put out a substitute which they think better than prohibition and let the merits of the two systems be examined.

"If they can not do it," he said, "they aren't ready for a referendum. They should wait until they have something to propose.

"The Methodists of the world are not afraid of a referendum on the liquor question. They are used to it."

Dr. Wilson, who is chairman of the Methodist Board of Temperance, said the dry forces would countenance a referendum on prohibition only if it were strictly according to the Constitution.

Process of Revision Described.

"All the wets have to do," he said, "is to elect two-thirds of the representatives and senators and submit a substitute for the prohibition amendment. All they then have to do is to elect a majority of both houses in 36 States and the eighteenth amendment will back out of the Constitution and let the wet substitute march in."

Dr. Wilson sharply criticized Mayor Walker of New York for leading "the loose and lawless elements of his misgoverned municipality to rally in a big wet parade."

Dr. Wilson warned that a "wet" candidate of the type of former Gov. Alfred E. Smith would find dry opposition in this year's presidential campaign no different from 1928.

Henry Ford's message, read at the quadrennial temperance and prohibition rally of the church, was brief:

"I give my unreserved support to the eighteenth amendment and the prohibition law," he wrote, "because they provide the degree of control over liquor which is necessary for national sobriety. As between a law which favors drinking and a law which favors soberness; the American home and church and school and workshop stand for the latter.

Prohibition "Best Method."

"Prohibition is the best method that has yet been devised to give effect to the sober sentiment of the Nation. We have always had excellent official cooperation in its enforcement."

His message was received with applause, but it was Dr. Wilson's statements that aroused the greater enthusiasm.

"The world," Dr. Wilson asserted, "is not big enough for an aggressive Methodism and an organized legalized liquor traffic. One or the other of them will have to get off the earth."

Recalls Civil War Draft.

"What a spectacle for angels and men that was," he said, "when the city that resisted the draft in the Civil War, paraded with banners of 'Down with the Constitution of the republic' 65 years afterward. A law officer asking citizens to parade their opposition to law!"

He branded as "folly" any assertion that restoration of liquor would bring back prosperity and said the real purpose behind the antiprohibition movement is "to make men so poor they can not buy bread or find work. The high principle of the Raskobs, Smiths and Du Ponts seems to be 'Let the poor mans thirst pay the rich man's taxes.'"

He mentioned President Hoover's name once, saying the President's statement, "Prohibition is an experiment in Government, noble in purpose. I wish it to succeed," was not said "like a Methodist would say it."

Rivalry in Bishopric Balloting.

Balloting for the election of two new bishops, the major interest of the conference business sessions, provided an upset when J. Ralph Magee, of Seattle, forged into a commanding lead in the voting after Lewis O. Hartman, of Boston, and Joseph M. M. Gray, of Detroit, became deadlocked on an early ballot.

The final ballot of the day gave Magee 454 of the 546 votes necessary for election. Gray and Hartman were deadlocked in second and third places with 285 and 282, respectively. Dr. Albert E. Day, of Pittsburgh, was fourth with 279 votes.

Delegates considered Magee's showing of strength sufficient to indicate his probable election during the early balloting tomorrow. They speculated widely on the person most likely to be selected to fill the other vacant bishopric. Some believed Day a formidable candidate, but nearly all conceded that the eventual choice would depend on the distribution of Magee's supporters, should the Seattle minister be selected a bishop.

BAPTISTS DENOUNCE AUTO, MOVIES, RADIO

Call Them "Subtle Influences Working to Dominate Christian Home."

St. Petersburg, Fla., May 16 (A.P.).—Automobiles, movies and radio were criticized by the press committee of the Southern Baptist convention today as "subtle influences working with skill and determination to dominate the Christian home."

The committee, making its report to the annual session of the convention, also took a fling at the secular press of America, including "an increasingly vulgar and coarse magazine and book output."

If these are "allowed to fashion the minds of our children without heroic and purposeful protest on the part of Christians, what are the results likely to be," the committee asked.

Regarding the automobile, the movies and the radio, the report said:

"Subtle influences are working with skill and determination to dominate the Christian home.

"More than 20,000,000 automobiles invite the American to spend every available hour out of the home.

Movies Attract 20,000,000.

"Another 20,000,000 Americans nightly attend picture shows. For that sensuous tinsel caricature of life, they spend a round billion dollars annually.

"Within the home millions of radio receiving sets make preemptory demands that the American shall not be permitted to meditate or to think for himself even by his own fireside."

The committee appealed to church members to cooperate with the denomination's publications in efforts to offset these influences. The Baptist periodicals, the report added, are "increasingly important to the spiritual welfare of our people in the complicated life of our times."

The report was adopted by the convention without discussion.

Minimizes Individual Freedom.

Dr. R. E. Harkness, representing the Northern Baptist convention, addressed the convention today urging less emphasis of the right of the individual freedom.

"The public's present attitude in that respect has given us the kidnaper, the assassin, the gunman and other criminals," he said.

The convention closed with a memorial service for the following deceased officers: E. W. Stephens, Columbia, Mo.; John E. White, Savannah, Ga.; S. P. Brooks, Waco, Tex.; J. L. Johnson, Hattiesburg, Miss.; Minerty Jones, St. Joseph, Mo., and W. Eugene Salle, Richmond, Va.

Dr. W. F. Powell, of Nashville, Tenn., was named chairman of the committee on boards which will recommend appointment of members to various church agencies at the 1933 convention, to be held in Washington, D. C.

Noted Japanese Flier Cracks Up

Yoshihara Suffers Broken Arm When Seaplane Crashes in Take-Off.

Oakland, Calif., May 16 (A.P.).—Seiji Yoshihara, known as "the Japanese Lindbergh," whose attempts to fly the Pacific Ocean have uniformly ended in misfortune, cracked up today as he took off from waters near the Oakland municipal airport.

Yoshihara suffered a broken arm. His acting mechanic, T. Oishi, Stanford University graduate, who earlier today had fractured three fingers in the whirling blades of the seaplane's propeller, also sustained a broken arm.

The new seaplane, in which Yoshihara had planned to take off next week for Japan by way of Seattle and Alaskan waters, was wrecked, probably beyond salvage. The seaplane had just taken off with the Japanese pilot at the controls and climbed perhaps 100 feet when he banked for a turn and the motor quit. The plane was over land when it crashed.

Continuance Is Granted To Col. Lea and Ramsey

Chattanooga, Tenn., May 16 (U.P.).—Defense motion for continuance in the trial of Col. Luke Lea, Nashville publisher, and J. B. Ramsey, Knoxville, on charges of violation of the national banking laws was granted late today by Federal Judge George C. Taylor, of the East Tennessee District.

The continuance was granted with the provision that when the defendants appear for arraignment at Knoxville May 31, the original date set for the trial, a new trial date will be announced.

SUZUKI PROBABLE SUCCESSOR TO INUKAI AS JAPAN PREMIER

themselves with nothing to do today, as the city was quiet.

The Tokyo, Osaka, Nagoya and Kobe stock exchanges remained closed, however. The rice and silk markets in the cities resumed trading. Prices tended downward.

Fascism in Japan apparently suffered a setback when as a result of Premier Inukai's assassination the military council decided yesterday to replace Gen. Sadao Araki, leading Nationalist, as minister of war.

Lieut. Gen. Jinzaburo Masaki, vice chief of the army general staff, was chosen by the military council to take over the war portfolio regardless of whether the cabinet, under Acting Premier Korekiyo Takahashi, eventually stands or falls.

Tokyo was guarded by police reserves against a terrorist plot of young army and naval cadets to seize the capital after its outbreak, but it apparently had collapsed with the assassination yesterday of the 77-year-old premier, foe of militarism and veteran of representative government in Japan, and a series of shootings and bombings.

"Old Gray Fox."

After the death of the "Old Gray Fox", who was shot down in his home in the second assassination of a Japanese premier in less than a year, the cabinet submitted its resignation to Emperor Hirohito through acting Premier Takahashi, who also is finance minister.

The emperor instructed the aged Mr. Takahashi and his cabinet to continue in office until further orders. Meanwhile, Prince Saionji, last of Japan's elder statesmen, was on his way to Tokyo from his villa at Okitsu for a conference between him and the emperor, an almost traditional procedure in recent governmental crises.

The bullets that killed the premier and wounded eight others in yesterday's wave of terrorism appeared to have dealt the fascist movement in Japan a death blow.

Admiral Minea Osumi, minister of the navy, who turned in his resignation with the rest of the cabinet, and who with Gen. Araki was another leading spirit of the nationalist movement, indicated that he, too, would retire from public life. Both ministers disavowed yesterday's events and said the perpetrators would be sternly dealt with.

Army Cadets Surrender.

Eleven young army cadets, corresponding to West Point Cadets in America, and six junior naval officers surrendered themselves to military police after the assault upon the premier, the bombing of five public buildings, including the police station across from the emperor's palace, and an attack upon the home of Count Makino, lord keeper of the privy seal.

Handbills left by the raiders denounced the present state of economic affairs in Japan, in which the inflation policy of the Seiyukai, of government part of Premier Inukai, has figured, the system of education and the administration of army and navy affairs.

The perpetrators of the outbreak were described as youngsters imbued with a mistaken sense of patriotism, who failed to find support for any such direct action in quarters of responsible authority.

The Seiyukai party, which took over the government from the Minseito party of former Premier Makatauki last December, will give Premier Inukai a state funeral Wednesday.

HOPEWELL EXPECTS LINDBERGHS' RETURN

Couple to Retain Home There After Englewood Visit, It Is Thought.

Englewood, N. J., May 16 (A.P.).—There is a strong probability that Charles and Anne Lindbergh will come to the Dwight Morrow estate here for a short stay and then again take up permanent residence at their Hopewell home, it was learned today.

The Lindberghs themselves have not announced definite plans. Friends here point out they have scarcely had time to make any, since the long strain of their kidnaped baby's absence ended in the shock of learning of his murder, and plans in the flier's family usually precede action by a very small margin.

But the Lindbergs have not given serious consideration to living abroad. It was learned near Hopewell workmen already are completing the drive leading to the Lindbergh house. Plans are going forward to have the slope leveled off in front of the house and made into an airplane landing field.

Normal Activities Continue.

Meanwile, the courageous couple never have relaxed entirely the lines of their normal life.

"We are living in an unreal world," Mrs. Dwight Morrow, Anne's widowed mother, told friends.

But Col. Lindbergh has been consulted more than once by business associates in aviation affairs, and Mrs. Lindbergh, who was believed to be staying continuously at Hopewell, has made secret trips as often as once a week to the family home here. Curled up like a sleeping child on the back seat of an automobile, she escaped glances of the curious en route. She has performed shopping errands in Englewood's business section and consulted her physicians.

It is assumed the Lindberghs will be in Englewood until after the birth of the baby expected in late summer. Charles Augustus, jr., was born here and here the family has been since Anne herself was born, except for the period when the late Senator Morrow was Ambassador to Mexico.

Relatives in Englewood.

Relatives are here too: Gen. Jay J. Morrow, brother of the late senator; Mrs. Sheldon S. Yates, Mrs. Morrow's sister; and at present, her mother, Mrs. Charles Long Cutter, from Cleveland, who is staying with Mrs. Yates. Mrs. Cutter is 87, and is so prostrated with grief over the tragic death of her greatgrandchild she has been unable to see callers.

"It is terrible—too terrible to talk about," Mrs. Yates said today.

No, the Lindberghs are not ones to quail at associations of the Hopewell house on Sourland Mountain, friends say. Recognizing they can not flee from grief, they probably will go back to their wooded estate to "fight it out" against memories that may assail them.

And when life moves normally once more and childish laughter is heard again through the rooms which have seemed more like a branch police station than a home in recent weeks, friends believed those memories may grow less poignant in their pain.

6 Suspects Sought Again by Officers

Men Released at Norfolk in Kidnaping Are Now Wanted Anew.

Norfolk, Va., May 16 (A.P.).—Federal agents and police, working on certain "loose ends" and clews here in the Lindbergh kidnaping case, are investigating the activities of six men arrested in Norfolk recently as alleged rum runners, it was learned today.

It was in the diary of one of these men that the notation, "Lindy X P M" was found opposite the date, March 1, the night the baby was stolen from his crib.

The men are not suspected of being connected with the kidnaping, it was learned, but are wanted again for questioning concerning any information or clews they may have. They were released after police hearings here. At the time of their arrest several weeks ago, police officials said the Lindbergh kidnaping case was kept in mind during the questioning of the six.

REMOVAL OF GLOVER ECHOED IN CONGRESS

repudiate in the name of his administration these sentiments expressed by the Second Assistant Postmaster General.

"He will not only repudiate them, but Mr. Glover, himself, will be a private citizen by nightfall."

Fulbright said in the House that if Glover was correctly quoted "it is the duty of the President to remove him," if the statement was made without Mr. Hoover's knowledge.

"If he made the statement with the knowledge and approval of the President," Fulbright said, "then the President is more responsible than the man who made the statement."

Senator Robinson, Democratic leader, said the Glover speech was a "disgrace to Government and to this administration."

Still further denunciation came from Representative Nelson (Democrat), Missouri, who inserted in the Congressional Record a statement saying "it marks a low and unworthy effort on the part of one who has discredited his official position."

Springfield, Mo., May 16 (A.P.).—George W. Hendrickson, Springfield postmaster, said today that W. Irving Glover, Second Assistant Postmaster General, who addressed the Missouri Postmasters Association here Saturday, made "a wonderful speech."

"Postmasters feel indebted to the Government administration for their positions, and that it is nothing more than right to put forth the proper effort and energy in reward," Hendrickson said, "I have heard many comments on the speech, all favorable."

Mr. Glover was wildly applauded when he invited the resignations of any postmasters unwilling to "get out on the firing line."

Arthur Curtis, Republican State chairman, said a postmaster is "not prohibited" from political leadership and is expected to help, of course, just like any other office holder.

Both Hendrickson and Curtis said political activity is expected only from first, second and third class postmasters, who are appointed by the President, and not from postal employes under the civil service, including fourth-class postmasters.

England's Loneliest Peer Dies From Auto Injuries

Earl of Egmont, Former Canadian Rancher, Lived in Castle Kitchen With Son, After Dismissing Retinue of Servants; Took Title in 1929.

Southampton, England, May 16 (A.P.).—The Earl of Egmont, former Canadian rancher called "the loneliest peer in England," because he kept to his castle in curious solitude, died in a hospital here today from injuries received in an automobile accident several days ago. He was 59 years old.

The three years since he came from his ranch at Priddle, Alberta, to claim the ancestral estate were spent in ranch-house fashion in historic Avon Castle, Hampshire, with only his son and heir, Viscount Perceval, for company.

The earl, member of a collateral branch of the Perceval family, succeeded to the title at the death of the ninth earl in 1929, discharged all the servants of the estate shortly after his arrival. Father and son established themselves in the huge kitchen of the castle, doing their own housework and cooking their own meals.

Viscount Perceval, like his father, is able to rope, throw and brand a steer, break a horse and accomplish other such feats of ranch life as the earl taught him. He will now succeed to the title as the eleventh earl.

The late earl, whose name was Frederick Joseph Trevelyan Perceval, and his son caused considerable sensation when they arrived in this country from their Alberta ranch. The father, a weather-beaten man from 28 years of strenuous outdoor life, seemed ill at ease among the splendid surroundings of his inheritance.

DR. CONDON MAKES EFFORT TO PICK PHOTO OF SLAYER

Quirk, to whom he said publicly: "I may be back to see you later."

The possibility the gang of baby killers might have themselves imprisoned for minor offenses was regarded with such favor by authorities that they dispatched letters to the governors of every State requesting that inquiries be made along this line.

Confidence in Schwarzkopf.

The day's official activities included these salient developments:

Col. Lindbergh wrote to Gov. A. Harry Moore expressing satisfaction and appreciation for the investigation conducted under the direction of Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, State police head.

Gov. Moore, who has followed the case with untiring interest from the outset, conferred with prosecuting and police authorities in determining the matters of jurisdiction. He reiterated Col. Schwarzkopf would have charge of all police activities.

The chief executive also formally accepted the renewed offer of Federal cooperation tendered by Attorney General Mitchell at the direction of the President. He expressed the thanks of the State for the assistance already given by the Government and indorsed the suggestion that J. Edgar Hoover coordinate the various Federal agencies and communicate with Col. Schwarzkopf. Mr. Hoover is chief of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice.

Col. Schwarzkopf telegraphed the Treasurer of the United States at Washington requesting that further efforts be made to trace the serial numbers of the specie which Dr. Condon paid to the extortionist.

The determined hunt along the Eastern coastline by Government craft, more than 100 in number, for the boat with which Curtis and Col. Lindbergh conducted fruitless negotiations, was given new life. Capt. Randolph Ridgely, commander of the Coast Guard in the New York area, said that the indentity of the vessel sought was known to authorities and that it had been in New York waters within the past two weeks.

In order that no opportunity for casting new light on the ransom negotiations be overlooked, the Bronx grand jury in New York City tomorrow will begin an inquiry into the activities of Dr. Condon. Several associates of Dr. Condon have been summoned to testify. District Attorney Charles B. McLoughlin, of the Bronx; Inspector Henry E. Bruckman, in charge of Bronx detectives, and Police Commissioner Edward P. Mulrooney conferred during the day.

Sleeping Garment Doubted.

Mulrooney disclosed that he had talked with Col. Lindbergh and the latter's close friend, Col. Henry E. Breckinridge, during the ransom negotiations. At that time the police commissioner said Col. Lindbergh appeared to be not greatly impressed with the purported sleeping garment of the baby sent to Dr. Condon, but he placed faith in letters which "Jafsie" received from the extortionist.

Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh remained in seclusion at their hilltop estate.

The story of the colonel's finances as related by the Brooklyn Eagle was that a week before the body of his baby was found last Thursday the colonel told an intermediary who visited him that he was "broke;" that the search had cost him personally $200,000, and that he had to borrow $25,000 of the $50,000 ransom money. The paper said it had learned the flier's money was invested in aviation securities, which have undergone considerable deflation. In other circles, however, it was pointed out that the colonel has investments of other kinds and that the Morrow family, of which his wife is a member, has wealth running into the millions.

AL SMITH FOR SALES TAX; OWEN YOUNG WILL NOT RUN

5. Modify the Volstead act, and tax beer and light wines.

6. Authorize a Federal bond issue to maek possible: An expanded program of Federal improvements; additional highway aid to the States; loans to limited-dividend corporations for the construction of low-cost housing, and purchase by the Federal Government of State and municipal bonds issued to finance local public works of long life and permanent value.

7. Defeat President Hoover's three-point Federal relief program (which Smith criticicized minutely).

8. Give the President a "free hand to provide aid for productive public works of States and municipalities as well as for additional Federal projects which will bring about the early employment of the largest number of men."

9. Empower the President to prolong, if necessary, the moratorium extended to debtor nations "until a real solution can be reached."

10. Discourage and avoid "in every possible way all blocs, cabals, insurgencies and mugwump tactics, by whatever name they may be called, which bedevil legislation, increase the depression, unsettle business and endanger our credit at home and abroad."

Roosevlt Silent on Tax.

Smith's advocacy of the sales tax lined him up, on that subject, with William Randolph Hearst. A long-standing feud has existed between the pair. Hearst did not support Smith in 1928 and has not supported him in his present candidacy for the presidential nomination.

In recent months Hearst has backed John N. Garner, Speaker of the House, who, in his first contest for delegates, took the entire California delegation away from Smith and Roosevelt, the other contestants.

Roosevelt, for whom 362 of the delegates elected to date are pledged, instructed or claimed, has not taken a public stand on the sales tax.

In discussing this subject, Smith said all his life he had been of and for the ordinary citizen of limited means and limited earning power.

"For this reason," he added, "I can not give my approval to the false friend who leads the workingman to believe that his condition of life can be bettered by the slogan attributed by the press to those opposed to the sales tax—'in order to make up the deficit, soak the rich.'

Holds Sales Tax Misunderstood.

"That means soak capital, and everybody knows you can not soak capital without soaking labor at the same time. They are bound together. One is essential to the other. The success of one means the success of the other. The destruction of one means the destruction of the other.

"It is a false friend who leads the poor man to believe that capital can be unreasonably taxed or soaked without injury to him. * * * Capital must bear the main burden of taxation, but it should never be an unfair burden."

He said the "man in the street" did not understand the sales tax. He estimated the yearly expenditure of the average family head among working classes at $1,000, and figured the sales tax would cost him about $8.

He concluded with this statement: "There are plenty of subjects to be discussed during the summer by conventions and candidates. Let us cooperate now and argue afterward."

Smith's Sales Tax Plea Here Believed Too Late

(Associated Press.)

Senate Democratic leaders now in the midst of the tax fight noted with interest but, for the most part, in silence the advocacy of the sales tax last night by Alfred E. Smith.

The private opinion was expressed by party leaders in the revenue contest that it was too late to revive the sales tax now in view of its decisive defeat by the House. Nevertheless, Senator Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, an advocate of Smith for the presidential nomination, will propose the sales levy in the Senate.

Even as Smith was outlining his views over the radio, Senator George (Democrat), Georgia, whose State is supporting Franklin D. Roosevelt for the presidential nomination, was assailing in Senate debate the sales tax as an effort to lift the heavy burden of income taxes from the wealthy.

Generally, the supporters of Gov. Roosevelt in the Senate have opposed the sales tax, although there is no indication that this is linked with the attitude of the New York Governor.

Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts, said "the position taken by Gov. Smith seems to me to be the only one that can be taken by one who realizes that we can not balance the budget without imposing a large number of excise and nuisance-taxes."

"His views are in accord with those reluctantly taken recently by the Democratic leaders in the House who were forced to the conclusion that the sales tax was fairer than inequitable levies on special businesses."

Brandon Named to Cast 24 Votes for Roosevelt

Montgomery, Ala., May 16 (A.P.).—Former Gov. William W. Brandon, of Tuscaloosa, has been personally commissioned by Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York to start the ball rolling in his quest for the Democratic presidential nomination at Chicago next month with Alabama's "24 votes for Roosevelt."

The former governor's cry of "24 votes for Underwood" became a byword at the 1924 Democratic convention, when this State's delegation was pledged solidly to the late Senator Oscar W. Underwood, of Alabama. Alabama, by alphabetical order, is placed at the head of the list of States, and Gov. Brandon's booming voice led off the roll call.

U. S. Agent for Kreuger Sought for Questioning

New York, May 16 (A.P.).—Anders Jordahl, American representative of the late Ivar Kreuger, is being sought on a subpena to testify in bankruptcy proceedings against the International Match Co.

James N. Rosenbergh, counsel for the Irving Trust Co., receivers, has obtained a court order forbidding Jordahl to remove records and securities from safe deposit boxes. He would like to question him on his knowledge of the ramifications of the vast industrial empire built up by the Swedish match king.

SHOUSE ASKS FIRM PROHIBITION STAND

Tells Connecticut Convention "This Is No Time for Pussyfooting."

Hartford, Conn., May 16 (A.P.).—A plea that Democrats unite in a fearless stand on the prohibition question was voiced tonight by Jouett Shouse, chairman of the national executive committee, in opening the party's State convention.

The convention tomorrow will elect sixteen delegates to the national convention, with every indication they will be instructed to support Alfred E. Smith for the presidential nomination. A minority of the group favoring Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt will be allowed to vote as it chooses on other convention questions.

"This is no time for straddling or pussyfooting," Mr. Shouse said in his keynote address. "In words nobody can misconstrue, misunderstand or misinterpret, we must pledge ourselves on prohibition, regardless of the circumstance that all our party is not in accord."

Tariff and Unemployment.

Shouse also urged the party to be explicit in its attitude on the tariff and unemployment relief measures and to avoid the "weasel-worded and double-meaning sentences" of the 1928 Republican platform. He assailed President Hoover's administration as largely responsible for the continuance of strained business conditions.

"The Republicans are pinning their last hope for November," he said, "on a bitter struggle in the Democratic convention. That hope will fail.

"There will be lively rivalry undoubtedly for the presidential nomination, but when the Chicago convention has completed its work, it will find all factions lined up solidly behind the nominee, whoever he may be."

Warns of Difficult Task.

He warned that overconfidence is the Democrats' most serious menace and that it is always difficult to upset an administration, adding:

"It is the plain desire of the country that we have a change; that the administration so largely responsible for the failure to check our business depression and for years-long delay in effecting economies in our Government—the obvious necessity for which was apparent from the first day of the panic—should not be trusted to muddle through the ensuing period of restoration and rehabilitation."

Russia Sends Sympathy To Tokyo Government

Moscow, May 16 (A.P.).—Vyacheslaff Molotov, premier of the Soviet government, today cabled Acting Premier Korekiyo Takahashi, of Japan, the condolences of Russia over the death of Premier Suyoshi Inukai.

The chief of the protocol department of the commissariat of foreign affairs simultaneously conveyed regrets of the government to the Japanese Ambassador here. There was no editorial comment on the violence in Tokyo.

BOYS SAVE 25 HORSES AS SIX DIE IN FLAMES

William Wallowitz and Harry Weeks, asleep in the dormitories about three blocks away were awakened by the blaze. They hurried to the scene and helped the two stable boys. Peters arrived in a police emergency car, and rescued three of the animals before the flames drove him back.

The boys said they believed they had saved all but half a dozen of them. Some of the horses were privately owned by prominent persons.

The building was destroyed. All of the saddles, harness and other equipment went with it, as well as large quantities of feed and office equipment and records. The damage could not be estimated at an early hour today.

LABOR ASKS RITCHIE TO CALL ASSEMBLY

State and Capital Federation Says 7 Cents an Hour Paid on Some Public Jobs.

Special to The Washington Post.

Cumberland, Md., May 16.—The twenty-eighth annual convention of the Maryland State and District of Columbia Federation of Labor opened here today for a three-day session. There are more than a hundred delegates attending.

Robert B. Kimble, president of Allegany Trades Council, welcomed the delegates and introduced Mayor George Henderson, who extended the greetings of the city.

A resolution was adopted late this afternoon requesting Gov. Albert C. Ritchie to call an extra session of the Maryland Legislature to provide unemployment relief. It was declared action should be immediate, one illustration being given that there are in Allegany County alone approximately 700 families about to be evicted for nonpayment of taxes.

Tax Delinquencies.

Federation President Henry F. Broening, Joseph P. McCurdy and J. Heiker, Baltimore; Robert B. Kimble, Cumberland, and John Geis, Hagerstown, were named as a committee to present the matter to the governor.

The O'Connor-Hull bill on taxation of beer, now pending, was indorsed. A petition to the President and Congress for a $5,000,000,000 bond issue, similar to Liberty bonds, to carry out a public works program was also authorized this afternoon.

Joseph Handlos, of Washington, presented a resolution, which was adopted, fixing a six-day week for work for barbers. Many barbers, it was declared, are required to work seven days. Members of Congress and statesmen, it was held, are contributors to this condition by requiring work on Sundays.

Reasonable Wage Scale.

Mr. Broening discussed a resolution regarding a reasonable wage scale in Federal, State and city works. It was contended that laborers working in connection with the new Cumberland postoffice building were paid on a very low scale and the same pay was true in some State road projects.

Mr. Broening declared as low as 7 cents an hour had been paid in Maryland. He declared a minimum wage of 50 cents, which the City of Cumberland has been paying for some time, should be obtained in all projects.

Federal employes accepting side work for profit in competition with unemployed labor was the subject of a resolution of condemnation, offered by Charles E. Sands, of Washington, which was adopted. It calls for legislation to prohibit this practice. Officers will be nominated tomorrow.

Sales Firm Loses Suit In $7,519 Against Bank

Charles D. Kenney, trading as the Washington Electric Co. and the Washington Electric Sales Co., yesterday lost in the Court of Appeals his fight to collect $7,519.85 from the North Capitol Savings Bank.

Kenny contended the bank had paid the money on checks payable to his company on the alleged unauthorized indorsement of one of his employes. The court found that Kenny knew of this practice and had failed to complain to the bank until after the money had been paid. Since, the court said, he had allowed this employe to assume in the bank's eyes a cloak of authority to cash the checks, he must stand the employe's alleged shortcomings.

Hearing on Dewey Will Contest Set for Oct. 19

The date of October 19 was set yesterday by Justice Jesse C. Adkins, in the District Supreme Court for the hearing on the contest over the will of Mrs. Mildred McLean Dewey, widow of Admiral George Dewey, the hero of Manila Bay.

The postponement was ordered last week, but at that time no definite date was set. The estate is made up of approximately $850,000 in real estate and personal property.

Square Named for Pope Pius X.

Vatican City, May 16 (A.P.).—The name of Pope Pius X was given to a square in a new layout of streets and squares in Vatican City today. Twelve squares and seventeen streets were renamed. A new street leading to the Vatican City radio station was named Via Guglielmo Marconi, in honor of the inventor, who supervised construction of the station last summer.

Rich Sportsman Jailed; Wife Charges Desertion

Pittsburgh, May 16 (A.P.).—Harrison R. McReady, wealthy Pittsburgh sportsman, was arrested today. His bride of a few months charged him with desertion and nonsupport. The McReadys were married after a midnight elopement to Cumberland, Md., last autumn, two days after McReady and Margaret Long McReady were divorced.

Ninety days later, the second Mrs. McReady, who was Marguerite Heasley, of Pittsburgh, filed suit for separate maintenance. She said the sportsman ejected her from his home in fashionable Fox Chapel Manor.

HERRIOT LEFT-WING REGIME HELD LOST

Refuses Socialist Demand for Cut in National Defense; Hitler's Gains Cited.

Paris, May 16 (U.P.).—The proposed left wing government of Socialists and Radical-Socialists under Edouard Herriot appeared tonight to be definitely doomed.

The refusal of Herriot, outstanding figure in the recent left wing election victory, to accept Socialist demands for huge military reductions was the chief cause in the failure of the two powerful parties to unite on a program.

When Herriot's party won an outstanding victory in the elections, the Radical-Socialist leader was faced with choosing between allying himself with Premier Andre Tardieu's center groups or with the Socialists, headed by Leon Blum.

Seine Socialists.

The most logical choice appeared to be the Socialists until last night's meeting of Seine Socialists, who were unable to agree on participation in a cabinet headed by Herriot. As a result, the National Socialist congress May 29, is expected to refuse to join a cartel.

Herriot, however, has continued to strengthen his personal prestige and will undoubtedly dominate the next cabinet, if he does not head it as premier.

"Between M. Tardieu and us there are many groups whose ideas are not widely divergent from ours," Herriot said last night at Nice. "Collaboration with the Socialists will be possible only if they accept reciprocal conditions.

Efficient National Defense:

"There is one basic principle we will not waive. That is efficient national defense based on a reasonable military budget."

The radicals have refused Blum's insistence on huge military cost reductions. Some Socialists have demanded as much as 6,000,000,000 francs reduction in the military budget, which has been considered alarming by conservatives who expect the military Fascist party of Adolph Hitler eventually to assume power in Germany.

Herriot is delaying any cabinet plans until after the national Socialist party congress, but it is becoming increasingly likely that there will be a "transition cabinet," possibly headed by Paul Painleve to replace the Tardieu cabinet after June 5. Later Painleve would surrender power to Herriot if he could get a majority without the Socialists.

St. Louis, May 16 (A.P.).—Several minor disturbances occurred today when bread wagon drivers, striking in protest against a 10 per cent wage cut, surrounded trucks of the Manewal Bread Co. Police made one arrest. The Manewal was the only one of sixteen companies affected by the strike which attempted to make deliveries.

ARLINGTON INDICTS 3 IN BANK ROBBERY

Army Sergeant and Pair of Capital Men Are Held on Felony Charges.

Within 48 hours after their arrest in connection with the robbery of the East Falls Church Bank Thursday, three men were indicted on three felony charges by a special Arlington County grand jury. The indictments were returned late yesterday afternoon and Judge McCarthy said bond would be set at $40,000 on each count.

Sergt. John A. Velke, 30 years old, of the Army Medical Corps at Fort Humphreys, and William B. Babcock, 25 years old, of 718 Eighteenth street northwest, were indicted on three charges of assault in connection with the robberies of the bank, the Clarendon terminal of the Washington-Virginia-Maryland Coach Co., and the terminal of the Arlington-Fairfax Transportation Co. George T. Below, 25 years old, of 2213 Rhode Island avenue northeast, was indicted on three charges of aiding and abetting and assault.

The men were arrested Saturday by Washington headquarters detectives, after a conference with Arlington County authorities.

The three men promptly entered not guilty pleas when they were arraigned in Arlington County Circuit Court. Judge McCarthy asked the trio if they had obtained counsel and Velke replied that they expected to have a lawyer by today and that the same attorney would represent all three.

The trial was set for the June term of court.

Arlington County police were yesterday investigating the reported robbery at the Cherrydale branch of the American Drug Stores.

According to Dr. John Owens, manager, when arriving at the store yesterday morning he found the rear door open and the safe unlocked. Opening the safe he found that all the money had been taken, amounting to a little over $200. He further stated that a portion of the money was in silver, which had been wrapped.

Mr. Leahy is one of the leading trial lawyers of the city. He is a former assistant district attorney and also served as a special assistant to the attorney general. He is a graduate of Holy Cross and of Georgetown University Law School.

Connally Will Be Guest At Friars' Stage Frolic

Senator Tom Connally, of Texas, will be the stage guest of honor at the Friars' frolic of stage, vaudeville and screen stars at the Washington Auditorium, Thursday night. Among the guests of honor will be Postmaster General Brown, Secretary of Labor Doak, Representative Sol Bloom, himself a Friar of long standing, and the Rev. Francis J. Hurney, chaplain of the Catholic Actors Theater Guild.

Due to conflict in daylight saving and Washington time, the original time and starting place of the big Friars' parade, Thursday noon, has been changed. Hurried earlier arrangements had contemplated use of a police motorcycle escort from the Union Station to the White House. The 70 Friars, however, will arrive in Washington much earlier, and the parade will begin promptly at 11 a. m. at Fourteenth and K streets northwest, proceed over K to Ninth street, down Ninth to Pennsylvania avenue, and up the Avenue to the White House, where the Friars will be greeted by President Hoover.

GAS-POCKET BLAST INJURES TWO MEN

Youth Badly Burned When Electric Spark Ignites Fumes Underground.

An explosion in a gas-filled manhole caused two men to be burned yesterday, one seriously, when the gas became ignited by an electric spark from a cable.

Frank Fowler, 19 years old, of 3010 Wisconsin avenue, employed by the Potomac Electric Power Co., as an electrician's helper, was removed to Providence Hospital, where he is in a serious condition with serious burns on the face and arms. John W. Summers, 33 years old, of 407 Second street northwest, also received burns about the face and arms but refused hospital treatment.

Fowler was working inside the manhole located at Twelfth and M streets southeast, and Summers was leaning over the top of the opening when an electric spark from a cable touched off the gas that had accumulated in the underground passage.

Fowler was given first aid treatment by the Fire Department Rescue Squad at the scene of the explosion after which they took him to the hospital.

The manhole was located in front of the large gas storage containers of the Washington Gas Light Co. According to members of the working crew all manholes in the vicinity are dangerous to work in as they are gas pockets.

WAR TAX RATES FAIL.

By a margin of eight votes the Senate has refused to return to the war-time income tax rates as a means of raising most of the revenue that is needed to balance the budget. This decision is an encouraging sign that the basic provisions of the tax bill will be adopted in much the same form as they were approved by the Senate finance committee.

Income tax rates approved by the committee run as high as 54 per cent on incomes above $1,000,000. The normal tax would be 3 per cent on the first $4,000 of net income, 6 per cent on the second $4,000 and 9 per cent on all above that amount. Surtaxes on incomes above $6,000 would run from 1 to 45 per cent. By any measurement that may be applied these are drastic taxes. It is impossible to justify higher rates than these.

Yet Senator Couzens asked the Senate to return to the rates of 1918 when as much as 77 per cent of the higher incomes was confiscated by the Government to carry on the war. A revival of that drastic law would have emptied the pockets of men in moderate circumstances as well as those of the rich. Relatively small incomes would have been taxed at the rate of 6 and 12 per cent. In this time of shrunken incomes and business stagnation these rates would be more than the people could or would bear. Wealth would rush into tax-exempt securities, and the depression would be indefinitely prolonged because of the absence of capital flowing into new enterprises.

The reasons why some members of the Senate supported these exorbitant rates ought not to be overlooked. Relief of the automobile industry from a proposed levy upon the sale of cars was apparently in the mind of the senator from Michigan, the home of the motor industry. Senator Borah demanded war-time rates to raise money for relief of the unemployed. How could the unemployed be relieved by driving capital into tax-exempt securities? Exorbitant taxes would do more to increase unemployment than any other action that Congress might take. The idea of drying up the sources of capital and industry to make a dole available to jobless men is the same logic that led to the death of the goose which laid the golden egg.

Senator Harrison stood loyally by the finance committee in opposition to the higher income tax rates, making an eloquent appeal to other Democrats to do likewise. Thus the Couzens amendment was defeated by a non-partisan effort. It is unfortunate that so many Democrats joined in the futile gesture to penalize wealth, but the public will be satisfied if the majority which defeated the proposed war-time rates can hold together to keep the finance committee bill intact until it has the full approval of the Senate.

OWEN D. YOUNG SPEAKS.

Owen D. Young writes to a friend as follows: "I can say definitely and finally that I can not, for reasons which are so controlling as not to be open to argument, accept a nomination for the presidency if made."

Thus a plain outspoken man has no difficulty in putting himself out of consideration as a candidate for the presidency. Politicians secretly yearning for office are affected by numbness of expression when they are asked to say yes or no. Such blunt expressions as that of Calvin Coolidge in 1927 and that of Owen D. Young in 1932 prove that other men, if they really wished to eliminate themselves as candidates, could say so in unmistakable language. Equivocal or ambiguous language on this subject can be taken as an indication that the writer is saying what he does not really mean.

Gov. Roosevelt, former Gov. Smith, Gov. Ritchie, and a few other Democrats have specificially declared themselves to be candidates. Owen D. Young has now specifically declared that he would not accept a nomination. What has Newton D. Baker to say? Is it not time for him to speak distinctly? The people respect men who say flatly that they wish to be President or that they would not accept the nomination if tendered. There is small respect nowadays for pussyfooters. The politician who dodges this issue goes far to convince voters that he would dodge other issues if he were in office.

PLANNED ECONOMY.

It is becoming more evident every day that out of the troubles and losses of the depression various good measures and movements are bound to emerge. There has always been talk of reforms in hard times, but never before has there been such systematic planning and determination to correct the weaknesses of the economic system. Economists, leaders of business and commercial organizations are working upon these questions with untiring zeal.

The old theories holding that good and bad times recur in inexorable cycles are being attacked with intelligence and foresight. The law of supply and demand is not denied; on the contrary, since it applies so inflexibly, modern facilities of communication, both for securing information and for effecting transportation, should expedite better adjustments of production to consumption needs. And it is inconceivable that industry will again plunge into a mad scramble of competition without more complete knowledge of market needs.

Advocates of the old ideas of independent action and individualism have seen the coming of the Federal Reserve System, the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Federal Trade Board, the Farm Board and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. They are not all perfect agencies, but they are playing important parts and their functions will be supplemented in the future by industrial organizations and marketing groups that will be highly instrumental in avoiding hereafter many of the excesses that have precipitated trouble.

It is not merely in the field of output and markets that better regulation will be developed. Labor and industrial capital will have a better understanding. Against provisions for dividends and reserve funds there will also be set up funds against unemployment, and there will be a more general adoption of the policy of spreading employment rather than discharging employes in times of slackening demand.

The creation of an economic council, whether under official or semi-official control, is something that can not be established quickly in an industrial nation of this size. Something of the kind, doubtless, will be worked out eventually. First will be seen the efforts of individual industries to help themselves. Even under existing restrictions it is believed that methods can be devised for the dissemination of information regarding market demands that will be useful in avoiding excessive output.

BRUENING'S PLAIN WORDS.

Closely following the triumph of M. Herriot in France comes the most categorical statement from Chancellor Bruening he has yet made, to the effect that neither now nor in the future will Germany make any further war payments. One of the results predicted under a French government formed with the leadership of the Radical Socialists is a more liberal attitude in international relations and in particular with regard to German reparations, but there is a wide difference between the former nationalistic policy and cancellation.

Chancellor Bruening has left nothing beyond his position for the Hitlerites to demand. He has not only made Germany's position clear, but is gratified that it has "gained greatly in recognition abroad, even in such countries as are our creditors, and not only public opinion but also the governments have struggled through to the recognition of complete cancellation of political debts as the most important prerequisite to ending the economic depression."

The Chancellor deplored the fact that this was not the position of all the interested governments and levelled the warning, inescapably directed across the Atlantic, in which he said: "I can see one hope—that in the near future the crisis will progress with such rapidity as to create a situation out of which clearly no nation can extricate itself."

Thus the German Chancellor expressed the opinion that the depression would break down American opposition to the cancellation of war debts. He also takes much for granted in assuming that an agreement can be reached at Lausanne to end reparations. Apparently Germany will go to that conference next month equally determined to bring down the level of armaments to her own status or be permitted to achieve equality through increasing her land and naval forces.

Driven to these extreme positions by the growing strength of the Fascists it is evident that the German government, already treating with Nazi leaders for participation in authority, can no longer withstand the pressure of radical demands. It is evident that the Bruening administration must go to the next international conference in a belligerent mood. The Chancellor shrewdly endeavors to shift attention from Germany's position to the dangers he points for all the world if these questions are not settled. Germany does not hesitate to add her pressure upon the United States, though not directly concerned, if in securing relief for American debtors she can force greater leniency from them with respect to her own reparation payments.

DESTROYING JUSTICE.

Tinkering with the judicial system is a favorite sport of Senator Norris. His latest effort in this respect is a bill to deprive the Federal courts of jurisdiction in cases between citizens of different States. As chairman of the Senate judiciary committee Mr. Norris has induced that body to approve his bill and it is now on the Senate calendar.

There is no excuse for such a bill, except Senator Norris' desire to meddle with the judicial system. Sometimes disputes between citizens of different States can be equitably settled only through resort to the Federal courts. To deny citizens the privilege of the Federal courts under such circumstances is to deny them the protection of the law.

Suppose a New Jersey corporation sues an individual in Oregon. If suit is brought in Oregon the court and jury are almost certain to decide in favor of the local citizen. Prejudice against foreign corporations is a common feeling among country people. In many instances it has been found impossible to obtain a verdict in favor of a corporation chartered in another State regardless of what the evidence might be. There is no way of lifting justice above these sectional prejudices, except through the Federal courts.

Insurance companies would be especially affected by the Norris bill. Unscrupulous individuals would be allowed to start suit against insurance companies in districts where prejudice against corporations is strong. The companies would have no protection against biased local juries. Furthermore, insurance claims against one policy frequently arise in several different States. Under present circumstances such cases can be taken to the Federal courts where the rights of all parties can be adjudicated at the same time. If the Norris bill were law, insurance companies might have to pay the same claim a number of times because of verdicts in different States.

Any sophomore law student knows that the State courts are not competent to handle suits involving citizens of different States. It is unfortunate that the judiciary committee has indorsed the Norrissian brand of justice, but it is not to be supposed that the Senate will indulge in such vicious tinkering.

CAPT. ROBERT DOLLAR.

Capt. Robert Dollar, who died yesterday at the age of 86, was an inspiring example to young and old men. With a meager education, and without means, he made steady headway in life, and at the age of 80 established the steamship system that made his name known around the world. His scheme for world-encircling voyages was scouted by other shipping men, but he proved that he was right. His vessels distributed freight in many countries and enabled tourists to visit all parts of the globe.

The shipping business is highly competitive, and the dislocation of world trade has badly crippled the oceanic carrier system. Yet Capt. Dollar persisted, in good times and bad, and somehow contrived to extend his operations. He was a canny mariner who knew his business and was diligent in it. His industry in mastering the details of his enterprises was most admirable. He brought credit to the American merchant marine.

The United States Senate costs the public $2,490 every hour it is in session. The other kind of crooning is cheaper.

Another unexplained mystery is why Senate pages should want to see the circus.

THE HOOVER DOCTRINE

From the Hartford Courant.

The use of the name of the President for the first time in describing the policy of nonrecognition of gains made in violation of the pact of Paris has given a new and important official standing to the doctrine which was applied in January to the Sino-Japanese situation. It now bears the dignity and weight of a major principle of the foreign policy of the United States, potentially comparable to that of the Monroe Doctrine.

In his speech before the American conference on international justice, Mr. Castle, the Acting Secretary of State, outlined with great clarity the history and the purpose of this instrument for the preservation of peace. He discussed frankly the question of the sanctions provided by the covenant of the league as a resort to force to end war. Because its successful application as a police measure demands its acceptance by all nations and therefore their surrender of individual decision in the most vital questions, he said he believed and hoped that the United States would never subscribe to it. He added also the first statement of the attitude of the Government toward boycotts and differentiated three distinct kinds. The official boycott he described as sure to lead to war. The unofficial boycott, as a popular expression of the consciences of the people, he considered very different from the official or the officially inspired boycott, and not a cause of war, since "no government can safely dictate" to its people in matters of conscience. This leaves the problem of the Chinese boycott open to further study before decision, but at the same time states in helpful fashion another general policy to be applied as circumstances require.

The Hoover doctrine has already proved useful. It offered a common ground of agreement when the police measures of the covenant were not acceptable to the nations on whom would fall the burden of carrying them out. It made it unnecessary to stigmatize as aggressor any nation at the time of crisis. It allowed the right and wrong of the case to remain open for decision until opportunity offered for first-hand investigation. At the same time, it provided a powerful deterrent to the great sacrifice of men or money in the hope of future profits in lands, rights or reforms.

So far, the doctrine has succeeded. The League of Nations joined with the United States in applying it to the situation in Manchuria. How it will work out when the time comes for the recognition or non-recognition of treaties is yet in question. It seems hardly possible that as a warning it will not have influence in deciding the temper of these treaties. Whether or not it, too, in the last analysis may lead to war remains to be learned. So also does the question of whether it would have the effect of "freezing the present injustices" of the world. But it is already clear that it offers a step in advance of the sanctions of the covenant and the hope that the profits of war may be so thoroughly eliminated that eventually no nation will care to try its strength at arms in the desire for gain.

PAUL HUDSON.

PAYING THE BILL.

Gen. Hines, chief of the Veterans' Bureau, according to the Topeka Capital, reports that this Nation has already spent $6,000,000,000 on the veterans of the World War. By 1945, he says, at the same rate the Government and taxpayers will have spent as much as the cost of the war. "We are practically financing another war," says Gen Hines. When a Nation takes on a war it must be a sport and go through with it. Nobody knows when the last war will be paid for.

An Army captain sends us a lot of statistical dope giving the wealth of leading nations and the behindhand condition of the United States Army and Navy. The figures give the wealth of the United States as over $320,000,000,000. "Unarmed and unprotected," he says, "we would be a nice prize for some powerful nation." It would probably come over, we suppose, grab off the $320,000,000,000 and take it home with it. But so long as we have to be looted, what difference does it make whether we are brought to bankruptcy by "some powerful nation," or by the costs of preparing for war, conducting war and later paying for war?

By ROBERT QUILLEN

PERSONALITY is defined by New York University as the sum total of an individual's qualities as they affect other people.

And students are told that 15 per cent of the individual's success in business is due to technical knowledge and the other 85 per cent to personality.

Both definition and measure of value may be correct, but personality is not a thing that can be taught in schools.

It is acquired only as happiness is—without plan or studied effort, as a sick man prospecting for gold unwittingly gains the greater prize of health.

Any conscious effort to acquire personality must fail, as a young lady must fail when she tries by artificial means to develop the charm of naturalness.

True, one can learn manners, grammar, deportment. But these, after all, are show tricks. So long as they require conscious effort they require acting. And acting is not personality, but only a cloak to conceal the lack of it.

The good actor may seem to have personality, but his art can not wholly conceal his insincerity, and the fact that he must pretend is proof that he lacks the material of which personality is made.

Acting requires self-consciousness, and the charm of a winning personality is unconscious. No possessor of a charming personality is aware of it.

The only way you can develop personality is to develop ingredients of which it is made and leave the rest to nature.

The people you like and admire and trust—the people who could win favors from you or sell you something you were reluctant to buy—are sincere people who mean what they say and make no pretense of being other than they are. Whatever they are, they are genuine.

They have the dignity and poise that come of self-respect and a clear conscience; they are sensible realists who never are victimized by wild rumors or strange isms; they have the courage and compassion of strength; they are clean of mind and body; they are unselfish, fair and tolerant.

All of these things you can be and have, without other magic than desire. Desire them as you desire success and life will give them to you.

And the sum total of these things will be the personality you desire, but you won't realize that you have it, for part of it will consist in the fact that you no longer think about it.

PRO AND CON

He's for What They Want.

Mandan Pioneer.

North Dakota can vouch for the astuteness of Gov. Roosevelt in his quest for votes. Didn't he indorse the Missouri River diversion project? Dollars to doughnuts he knows as little of the convolutions of the Missouri through this State as we North Dakotans do of the Yangtse-kiang. A candidate who will commit himself to a $25,000,000 or $50,000,000 Federal project, with as little information as Roosevelt possesses on the subject, comes far from fitting in with our ideal of fitness for a President of this Nation.

Bonus Boys.

Detroit News.

Seems So.

Boston Transcript.

Among other things, Congress is the big hole in the Nation's pocket.

That Beer Parade.

Cincinnati Enquirer.

The picture of Mayor Walker as the sponsor and leader of a "beer parade" scarcely inspires great enthusiasm. No doubt such demonstrations are far from being unpopular in New York, but his honor might remember that in such instance, he is striding and smiling before the amused—perhaps somewhat startled—gaze of some hundred million of people outside the boundaries of New York.

It is true that proper and substantial revenue could be derived from a tax on legalized beer, but it is much to be doubted that even the presence of President Hoover at the head of a parade of disciples and advocates of a "give us beer" parade could much advance the interests of a beer tax policy.

Mr. Mellon's Genuine Service.

Springfield Republican.

Mr. Mellon's exhibition of cheerful optimism over our institutions and of reasoned hope in our future is a pleasing picture, coming from a man whose age and experience lend authority to his judgment of the present by the past. He is at least a robust believer in his country, and he has been able to do his country genuine service by this expression of confidence at a time when it seemed to be badly needed in Europe.

Congress' Big Task.

Houston Post.

Leaders in Congress are talking of making heroic efforts to assure adjournment by June 10. That is not necessarily a worthy goal. The important thing right now is not when Congress adjourns, but enactment of a program of legislation that will aid in economic recovery of the Nation. There is a great deal of important business pending in Congress, and probably far-reaching relief measures will be submitted shortly. These should be thoroughly considered. There should be no ill-considered legislation dealing with relief thrust upon the people. Bills are being proposed that will call for the expenditure of billions of dollars. That money will eventually come out of the pockets of the taxpayers. In the effort to relieve the unemployed, the ability of the taxpayers to pay should be taken into consideration. If it is essential that Congress not be in session when the national party conventions are meeting, the two houses can take a recess over those periods. Let it be said again, this Congress should not adjourn until it has done all it can do through legislation to restore economic stability in the country. As compared with the duty of doing that, adjournment date is an inconsequential matter.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Reader Discusses Senator Bingham's Beer Tax Figures.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Senator Bingham used to be a professor at Yale University, but apparently he has forgotten his training. Certainly, his recent pronouncements on the revenue value of beer are not scientific.

He says the national Treasury would profit $375,000,000 a year by legalizing and taxing 4 per cent beer. If this figure is analyzed, it is found that he believes that the 37,000,000 adult men in the United States are capable of consuming something more than 5,000,000 barrels of beer a month. He overlooks the fact that not all men are beer drinkers. He also forgets that, having learned to make their own, a considerable number of those who do drink beer will continue to make it themselves and not pay any tax for the privilege. To render his scheme successful the vast majority of American men would have to spend at least 75 cents a day for beer. Since a considerable number are puzzled as to where to find 75 cents to spend for food and shelter, necessary things, not many will be attracted by the suggestion that they find an additional 75 cents to spend for beer, a luxury.

His notion is neither sound sense nor good policy. The difficulties include those of finding capital for the vast industry he would set going—capital which of course would have to be withdrawn from other industries, and devising an effective way for collecting the legal tax on the beer manufactured. At best, he would be but restoring a luxury trade—a ridiculous thing to attempt at a time when the country is hard put to finance and maintain necessary trades and businesses. R. E. W.

Call for Citizens to Organize Against Crime—National Convention Foreshadowed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "Up to the People," strikes exactly the right note. If American civilization is to be preserved, American men and women, organized for that purpose, must do it.

I suggest calling a meeting in Washington of citizens willing to cooperate. Let this gathering decide what methods are best to adopt. Then let individual communities throughout the land form their own committees to follow the same plans of campaign. A national convention ought to result, and an organization be perfected for the whole country.

Such an organization could not be bought. Neither could its influence be denied. There is no other way to solve the problem.

If the American people are cowardly and selfish enough to be willing to suffer further violations of the fundamental decencies of life, they are traitors to the ideals of the great national leaders, past and present, to whom they owe all that they are and all that they have. But I believe they will resist; I believe they have the courage and the judgment to defend their citizenship, their property and their loved ones. Only a leader is needed, and Col. Lindbergh himself would be the ideal man for the place.

ALDEN WARD.

Mrs. Simpkins Voices Nation's Appreciation of Heroism of Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There seems to be but one hopeful thought in the Lindbergh tragedy, and that is the courage, dignity and perfect behavior of the brave father and mother in their suffering. No words of appreciation can add to their acknowledged heroism, but the youth of America may learn much from the beauty of character and noble example of our national hero and his equally heroic wife.

HENRY LELAND.

Henry Leland at eighty-nine,
And broken and frail and ill,
Still wanted to stand in the fighting line
And battle his way up hill.
For all that he asked was strength to share
In the tasks which leave men sore,
And he begged the burdens of life to bear
For another ten years more.

I can see him now as I saw him then,
Three days ere his time to die,
Still wanting to share in the work of men,
But knowing the end was nigh.
Though he had suffered the cruelest blows
Which Time and the Fates can give,
In the face of ever-increasing woes
He begged for the right to live.

"I want to work longer," he said to me;
"I don't want to die just now.
I'm an old, old man, but I still can be
Of use to the world somehow."
And I thought as I sat in his hospital room
Of some who had fled from stride
And had chosen to go to a self-wrought doom,
Afraid of the cares of life.

Henry Leland, at eighty-nine,
And broken and tired and frail,
Still begged for a chance on the battle line
And a chance to win or fail.
What life can do to a man he knew,
He had risen and fallen before;
But, dreaming of tasks which he still might do,
He pleaded for ten years more.

How to Be Beautiful

By ELSIE PIERCE

Preventing Freckles Is Infinitely Easier Than Correcting Them.

AS I told you yesterday, the modern woman is delightfully far-sighted. Long before the bathing suit season beckons, she is prepared for it. She knows that the summer sun means no more freckles, if she is at all inclined to have them, and she knows, too, that it is a very easy matter to prevent these little blemishes than to correct them.

Elsie Pierce.

Innumerable inquiries regarding freckle removers come to my desk daily. Invariably, my reply carries a word of warning with it. Freckles are caused by irregular formations in the pigment. The warm summer sun serves to exaggerate these irregularities. Creams and lotions made to protect the skin against the burning rays of the sun, and plenty of powder, should be used. This protective barrier will not only ward off freckles, but sunburn and coarseness as well. It takes a minute or two to apply a protecting, sun-proofing cream or lotion and powder and it is well worth the time and effort involved to preserve the skin's delicate, transparent clear tone.

As a rule, the skin prone to freckle formations is the sensitive, thin, light type. The blonde with blue eyes and thin skin, the redhead with light eyes and skin as delicate and fragile as Dresden China, are the types that suffer most. A few freckles across the bridge of the nose often give their owner a piquant air that is very becoming. But when the "spots" grow and multiply until they become big brown or black blotches, no one can gainsay the fact that they mar milady's loveliness.

In addition to the local protection mentioned above, the large beach hats and parasols should be used as a counter-attack against old Sol's pranks.

Bleaching the Skin.

When these rules of prevention are disregarded, the penalty must be paid. However, there are any number of bleaches that can be used with safety to make the freckles lighter and less noticeable, but so-called "removers" should be avoided. Many of the extra-strong bleaches contain mercury which may prove extremely harmful to the skin. And any preparation that is strong enough to actually remove freckles may remove the skin as well. Better to use a little slice of lemon as a mild bleach.

There are other mild bleaches that can be made at home, fruit and vegetable juices, buttermilk and similar simple beauty aids. There are several circulatory creams and lotions that whip up the circulation, bringing the bloood to the surface and by the same token clearing and lightening the skin.

When choosing a bleach, it is always advisable to try a mild one first and if the skin's reaction is favorable, gradually increase the strength of the preparation and the time it is allowed to remain on the skin.

If you have a delicate skin, or have ever been troubled with freckles, particularly the summer variety, do look ahead and prevent the pesky little blemishes.

A bulletin called "Freckles, How to Deal With and Dim Them" outlines several remedies you can make at home for use as mild bleaches. A copy is yours for a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

How to Keep Well

ACID MILKS FOR BABIES.

THE present tendency in the feeding of children when cows' milk is used is to give a soured milk rather than milk of the ordinary kind. This is based on the pretty well proved theory that the proteins of milk are too well protected by lime to make them easily digested.

The most popular of the acid milks is that prepared with lactic acid tablets. One method of making this is to use one tablet of lactic acid bacilli in a quart of milk. The tablet is crushed and suspended in one or two tablespoons of the milk. This is added to the remainder of the milk and the mixture is placed in a glass dish, heated to 80 degrees Fahrenheit and held at that temperature for 20 minutes. The milk is well curdled. It is mixed and the curds thoroughly broken with a spoon or egg beater. The next step is to pass the milk and curds through a wire strainer. This is the product, lactic acid milk.

A tablespoonful of this product can be used in place of the tablet to make the next batch.

Most people start with a boiled milk. Some, however, use pasteurized milk, and some use the raw article. If whole milk is used the surplus fat can be removed with a spoon after the curd forms. This is only one of several ways of making lactic acid milk. Some use the acid itself rather than the bacilli that make it; others use different acids. One recipe for muriatic acid milk is: One quart milk, one pint water, 25 drops of dulute muriatic acid. The milk and water are mixed and brought to a boil. The acid, diluted with twice its volume of water, is slowly added to the milk while vigorous stirring is done.

A soy bean and condensed milk mixture is made as follows: One tablespoon soy bean flour, twice as much barley flour, one quart milk. To one quart of milk add the flours and a bit of salt. Mix well. Boil for twenty minutes. Add enough water to make one quart. Add four ounces condensed milk to the quart of milk and flour.

Some children who do not thrive on ordinary milk get along well on buttermilk. Some do well on cottage cheese.

SCARLET FEVER.

A mother writes: I was interested in your article on scarlet fever. Our little boy came down with a cold which, to all appearances, cleared up in three days, only to return a week later a bit more severe, but still a "cold." Rested in bed again for four days and he was well again, but I took him to a doctor for a checkup. The doctor found "an awfully red throat." He did not look at his ears and I did not think to ask him to do so, much to my infinite regret. There had been no chills, convulsions, nor rash, though one night I thought he looked awfully red. I looked for a rash in the morning, but there was none and his skin has gone back to its usual color. So light a case of scarlet fever, and yet it was enough to develop a most severe case of mastoid, which caused his death, despite all that a most skillful doctor could do (not the one who found only "a red throat").

I wish you would think it wise to tell mothers and fathers through your column how tricky scarlet fever can be.

IT CAN'T BE DONE.

1. No.
2. Nothing that I know of.

Interpreting the Mode

By DARE

Illustrating the lighter colored top, two lovely gowns in black, one with white peau d'ange decolletage in "backbone strap" effect, the other in black sheer crepe with a shrimp-pink satin wrap, sleeves edged in silver fox. (Selected on Fifth avenue, New York.)

NEW YORK, May 16.—In the days of the Florentines—when Florence was a city of only 30,000 inhabitants—luxury was something. Maybe for only the few, but these few knew how. Witness the story of part of the trousseau of Giovanna de Medici—how the lovely lady wore a gown of cloth of gold—not lah-cay, my deahs, but that cloth of gold which was woven of real gold, spun as fine as art could spin it, heavy as metal, which glitters to this day without a streak of tarnish. Whilst her dress, under this, was of a heavy white silk—a luxury uncountable in those days, and 'taws powdered with pearls and trimmed with sable and ermine.

Eight pairs of silk stockings and four pairs of silk gloves lay side by side with a cape of silver and pearls, a fine lawn shift, and many robes with with trains of brocade and velvet with fur. Lucky Giovanna! Lucky us! For we would consider ourselves rather badly off if we had only eight pairs of stockings, wouldn't we? Even though the sable and pearl sprinkled robes would compensate somewhat!

• • • •

Now the decolletage has moved again! 'Course you could never guess where—haven't we had about all the back exposure compatible with our present ideas of good taste? And all the front exposure, even to a bit of tummie and a couple or ribs? Where now!

Well, at the side, right under the arm! Patou has this idea, and shows many a lovely cinema gown with high neckline front and back, and two slits under the arm to the waist, most intriguing.

Many of the newest decolletages are slanting in movement—this movement even accentuated with a colored insertion to emphasize its "sidewaysness." But when the home dressmaker gets into angles in her necklines—watch out! It takes art and balance, and an equality of pull that is absolutely an art. Practice makes it, though.

• • • •

Is there any pajama that can fit? Yes, there is! And it need not take worlds of material, and not hard to cut—you just have to know how to do it, that's all. Any kind of pajamas have a right to fit—whether they are for housework or for sleeping or for lounging. Any kind of pajama is flattering if it fits. That's why we have made a leaflet telling you how to cut pajamas that are on the bias so that there is plenty of wide trouser leg, but a smooth fit over the hips—and so that the trousers don't hang badly, either, as so many of the wide trouser legs will if they aren't cut just right. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for this leaflet and see for yourself how pajamas should really be made, and how easily!

• • • •

Jackets make the ensemble! The dress gown I sketched for you today is elegant and simple—just black sheer crepe, well cut, and not too decollette—miladi could wear it for Sunday night or even for a cinema gown. But—adding a shrimp-pink satin jacket, tiny and bolero in effect, banded with huge cuffs of silver fox, the ensemble is far more formal—and suitable for a most elaborate effair. One black and one pink flower, and a matching pink handkerchief, lace edged—and either black or pink suede gloves, and you have the whole and elegant story!

Then the decolletage on the smaller figure is most interesting—again the lighter touch on black—this time white peau d'ange in a "backbone strap" effect, on a stiff black satin gown. This gown is, of course, more formal than the other—and one would wear either a white, black, red or green jacket with it—with or without fur, accordingto one's taste.

Au Revoir!

What Today Means to You

"TAURUS."

IF May 17 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:15 a. m. to 1 p. m., from 4:30 p. m. to 6 p. m. and from 10 p. m. to 11:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:35 a. m. to 8 a. m. and from 2 p. m. to 3:30 p. m.

The tempo of life's activities on May 17 will be decidedly large. Work will be done in a fumbling manner, social activities will lag and there are few things for which it could be called an auspicious time, from an astrological viewpoint. A poor time for dealing with important correspondence.

Children born on this May 17 will have warm, fervid natures. They will be full of self-esteem and will face the world with an undying optimism. They will be both interested and interesting and will become favorites both in the schoolroom and on the playground. They will make average students.

Born on May 17, you have nimble wits and undeniable charms. You are largely tolerant, not easily irritated and resolutely keep your mouth from drooping at the corners. You are more active mentally than physically and are better at thinking things out than doing them personally. You are quicker with your tongue than on your feet. You are clear and emphatic as a leader or director and exhibit more patience than most people of your temperament. You have a way of winning the loyalty and affection of your associates and of making anyone and everyone be of some service to you. Your selfishness is sweetened with affability and smiles and your gratitude is effusive and genuine. It is true with you, as with others of your type, that not by giving out, but by receiving things, you make people fond of you.

You are not fond of solitude, and are soon bored with your own company. You are constantly craving excitement, change and some form of outside stimulation. You, almost intemperately enjoy the social side of life, and more often—and many times gladly—let play interfere with work than duty with pleasure. Your egotism shows up in relation to anything which is yours, especially the human element, and you will not brook any criticism of your children, friends or family. If you can keep from falling into the taken-for-granted rut, you will retain your marriage happiness.

Successful people born on May 17:

Former King Alfonso XIII of Spain.

PLANS A DELICIOUS WEDNESDAY DINNER.

IT SEEMS rather an age since we have suggested pork chops for dinner and since this recipe of ours for pork chops with Spanish sauce is a mighty tasty one, we are wondering how it has escaped our attention for such a time. However, here it is for tomorrow's repast, and with it cabbage baked with apples, always a good combination with pork, and a tomato aspic salad which, along with stewed rhubarb, will round out a substantial and well-balanced evening meal.

WEDNESDAY'S DINNER.

Pork Chops in Spanish Sauce
Mashed Potatoes
Baked Cabbage and Apples
Tomato Aspic Salad
Stewed Rhubarb
Molasses Cup Cakes
Coffee

Baked Cabbage and Apples.

1 quart shredded cabbage
2 cupfuls sliced apples
2 tablespoonfuls butter
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoonful sugar
1 cupful buttered breadcrumbs

Place a layer of cabbage, then a layer of apples in a greased baking dish. Sprinkle with salt and sugar and dot with butter. Repeat until all ingredients are used. Cover with butter crumbs. Cover and bake until apples and cabbage are tender, then remove cover and brown the crumbs.

Tomato Aspic Salad With Cheese Balls.

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1 can tomatoes
½ onion
1 teaspoonful celery seed or
1 cupful chopped celery
2 tablespoonfuls tarragon vinegar
1 bayleaf
2 cloves
Bit of cayenne
1 cupful mayonnaise

Add one-half cupful of cold water to the gelatin and set aside to soften. Cook all the ingredients together for ten minutes, with the exception of the gelatin and the vinegar. Strain and add it to the gelatin and vinegar. Pour into molds and let stand overnight or until set. Serve on hearts of lettuce leaves and garnish with small cheese balls and mayonnaise.

Molasses Cup Cakes.

1-3 cupful butter
½ pint molasses
1 teaspoonful soda
1 teaspoonful ginger
½ teaspoonful salt
½ pint sour milk
2¾ cupfuls flour

Sift the soda, ginger, salt and flour. Cream one-third cupful shortening, then add part of the dry ingredients. Add the molasses and sour milk alternately with the remainder of the dry ingredients. Bake in muffin tins in a moderate oven about 25 minutes.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES McDONALD

Straying Husbands.

DEAR Miss McDonald: Five years ago I married a wonderful man. He did everything in the world for me and we just loved each other. We had our own home and had it furnished wonderfully. We also had a car and could go and come when we pleased. And had plenty of money to get along the rest of our lives. We had everything to make us happy and we were happy until five months ago.

He met another woman and he just fell for her. She is married and has two children. He got in the habit of going out nights, leaving me alone. He wouldn't take me anywhere and made life miserable for me. I was nearly crazy. Finally the time came when he had to choose between her and me, and he left me flat, with nothing. I do own my home and lucky I do, for he has everything else. It's breaking my heart to think of my husband doing a trick like this when we have been so happy. We got along better than the average.

I asked him to come back and forget the past but he only says he is "through." And I know he still sees this woman. She only cares for his money for she knows she can never marry him.

I am nearly insane at times. Do you think he will see his mistake or do you think he will continue to go with this woman? I am working and boarding with my people and he thinks it is terrible to board there, as he never liked my folks. If he ever wanted to come back, do you think I'd be taking a chance or do you think he would learn his lesson?

He changed so suddenly, I can't understand it. I do wish he would come back and be the man he was a year ago. But he says he will never come back. What is your advice?

BROKEN-HEARTED.

Most of the men who embark upon these small adventures that wreck their homes would gladly return after the bubble burst if it were not for the matter of pride. They hate to face the world and admit that their great romance was just "one of those things." Your husband is probably no exception to the rule. He may some day return but that day will not be hastened by your solicitation. You should attempt to build up a life for yourself aside from any consideration of what his future whims may be.

His interest in where you live is rather amusing in the circumstance. It is, however, evidence of his discomfort over his behavior. Why not avoid him and force yourself to go about and enjoy life? Indifference will interest him where solicitude would bore him. Look your very best at all times, seek new acquaintances, go new places, and build up a new personality. Men given to straying seldom return out of pity. It is invariably jealousy that brings them back. If you want a man to remember you, forget him. And that goes for husbands.

Advice on Gardening

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

PLANTS DEMAND FOOD.

SO many letters are coming to my desk regarding the proper nourishment of plants, both garden and house varieties, that I feel it is wise to devote an article to this subject, even though almost every article in the last six weeks has made reference to some form of fertilizer.

Plants, like people, can be overfed and they can also be undernourished. When overstimulated they put forth large quantities of foliage, which is usually a little different from that which results from a more mormal development. Sometimes the leaves are smaller, and usually they are borne on longer stems, but stems that can not quite sustain themselves, so that the plants have a rather droopy appearance.

Again, the leaves may be large and coarse, but in either case much of the general attractiveness is gone. Overfed plants never produce flowers, except perhaps a few rather indifferent blooms, as all the energy of the plant has gone into developing foliage.

In the case of the flowers which may occasionally be produced, the colors are never true. Usually they are pale and lifeless.

Underfed plants, no matter whether they are in the house or in the garden, always become the prey of some insect or disease.

The best plant foods are those rich in nitrogen, which is essential to all plant development. Generally speaking, I consider liquid manure the best all-round food. I am always loath to recommend patent foods because, while they are quite all right in the hands of the skilled horticulturist, in the hands of the amateur, who is not familiar with their formulae and their uses, they may be worthless.

Liquid sheep manure can be easily made by placing 25 pounds of dried sheep manure in an ash can of water. Keep the container closed nd in the sun for about ten days before using. (Once a day the mixture should be stirred.) Two ladlefuls of this mixture should be added to a watering pot of water. You can use this once every week with perfect safety on everything in the garden that you feel is in need of such a tonic.

LUCK AT CARDS.

I AM firmly convinced that there is no such thing as luck in a game of cards. Blind Chance is the most impartial of all goddesses. Her favors fall alike on the just and and the unjust, the good player and the bad. So far as human beings, however, are concerned, the element of luck is, in many cases, the controlling factor. There is no doubt that in many a church yard "some mute, inglorious Milton" may lie, because he lacked the opportunity to make the poetry that surged within him known to the world. This is the element of luck—the conjunction of man with opportunity.

After this homily, I am going to give you the story of what my friend, Dr. I. H. Shelly, of Norristown, Pa., describes as the "luckiest hand." It was played in a championship event recently between Dr. Shelly and his partner and Mr. and Mrs. Jay Jones, of Philadelphia. While they did not know of it at the time, these two pairs were contesting again t each other for first position. This is the hand which Dr. Shelly calls the "luckiest" and which decided the event:

North—Dealer.

(Dummy)
♠ 10 4
♡ J 10 9 5
◇ 10
♣ A K Q 9 6 4

♡ 8 7 6
◇ A Q 9 6 5
♣ 10 7 5

♠ K 8 7

The Bidding:

South	West	North	East
		2♣(1)	Pass
2♠(2)	Pass	3♠(3)	Pass
6♠(4)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—North explained his bid of two clubs later as a slip of the tongue.
2—The correct response.
3—Incomprehensible.
4—Perhaps a little optimistic, but then the Doctor felt lucky.

Mrs. Jones, unwilling to lead away from the tenace in diamonds, decided that the North and South bidding had shown such complete control of the trump suit that a trump lead could do no harm. Therefore, she opened the spade 6. The ten in Dummy was played and Mr. Jones refused to cover, so another round of spades was led and finessed, the King falling on the third round. After disposing of the adverse trumps, Dr. Shelly led a club and the adverse clubs split evenly, giving him five discards. He thus lost but a single trick.

The luck that characterized this deal was not in the cards, but in the reactions of the players to them. North's momentary inattention, resulting in his unsound bid of two clubs, followed by his effort to "get from under" by giving his partner an unwarranted raise in spades, was the first factor in the lucky result. The second factor was West's holding in diamonds, which made a lead in that suit appear undesirable and a lead of a trump not harmful. That both of these events should have occurred simultaneously unquestionably was lucky, but the cards themselves, obeying immutable mathematical laws, had nothing to do with the case.

TODAY'S POINTER.

While blind chance plays many pranks at the bridge table, causing some players to bemoan their ill luck and others to be known as lucky players, actually chance, or luck, is the most impartial of all the goddesses we worship. Her favors fall alike on the good player and the bad.

TOMORROW'S HAND.

CHILDREN FILL TENT AT RINGLING CIRCUS

Thousands Attend Performance, Declaring Show Bigger and Better This Year.

That glamorous land of childhood, where it is an everyday occurrence for the cow to jump over the moon and for the dish to run away with the spoon, became a tangible reality yesterday afternoon and last night when the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey circus invaded the vicinity of Florida avenue and Fifth street northeast.

The big tent and its family of many smaller tents drew a crowd of 10,000, most of whom were children. An equally large attendance was reported last night. But the complete atmosphere of the circus was most in evidence in the afternoon when the younger children were present and heat from the warm sun penetrated the billowy folds of canvas, mingling with the odor of sawdust and roasted peanuts.

Many of the kiddies were at the circus for the first time, and they could be seen standing spellbound as an acrobat performed some magic feat far above their heads; their peals of laughter rang across the sight things as clownland reeled out the biggest and funniest comic strip they had ever seen.

Senator Davis Attends.

Men prominent in Government and business circles were present with their youngsters. They included Senator James J. Davis and Mrs. Davis and their children and a number of diplomats. Many of the grown-ups took the added precaution of bringing nurses, apparently suspecting beforehand that they would become so absorbed in the big show that they would forget their precious wares.

The depression has had no noticeable effect on the circus. In fact the show gives every indication of being bigger and better than ever. There are more clowns, more animals, more acrobats and more freaks. And the pink lemonade and attendant ballyhoo appeared to be doing as rushing a business as in the days when prosperity blossomed in the land.

The show starts with a bang of color and ends with a bang of powder when a man is shot from the mouth of a cannon across the main ring. The grand entry alone, which includes a herd of elephants and all the other animals Kipling's kin ever met in the jungle, will give your kiddie mind mine something to talk about until Christmas.

Savages Among Wonders.

Other wonders of this year's circus include the Ubangi savages from Africa, whose lips look like saucers; aerial acrobats, who do more than a stunt airplane; clowns, with latest gas in trick automobiles, educated mules and the ever-popular Clown-town fire department.

Irvin Cobb's daughter, Elizabeth Cobb Chapman Brody, who is making her debut as an equestrienne under the big top, received a rousing ovation. Approbation from young and old alike was also given Miss Theol Wilson, the champion long-distance rambler of the world; Alfreda Codona, famous aerialist, and Lucita Sellers, a new marvel in trapeze artistry. The high-wire acrobats, giving the greatest thrills, were the Hustrie troupe and the Wallendas.

That's all we'll tell you. To see the rest just step right up and—well, ask Mr. Ringling. The circus will give two more shows in Washington—this afternoon and tonight.

AUTHOR'S DAUGHTER WITH CIRCUS

Underwood & Underwood.

CAPT. DOLLAR, SHIP MAGNATE, EXPIRES

Was in 89th Year; Slogan of "Hard Work" Ardently Observed in Career.

San Rafael, Calif., May 16 (A.P.).—Robert Dollar, shipping magnate extraordinary, who made the "$" his trade-mark in ports the world around, died of bronchial pneumonia at his home here early today.

He was in his eighty-ninth year and almost to the end dictated the policies of the vast ship lines bearing his name.

Flags on State and municipal buildings were dropped to half-staff as news of his death became known—unusual recognition for a private citizen—and standards of ships in San Francisco Bay rendered like tribute at the passing of "the grand old man of the Pacific." His title "captain," was one of courtesy.

Funeral services will be held here Wednesday at the First Presbyterian Church of San Rafael, of which Capt. Dollar was a steadfast member. The chimes he gave the church years ago in memory of his daughter, Mrs. Grace Dollar Dickson, will sound his dirge.

Ill Two Weeks.

Capt. Dollar had been ill two weeks. He was taken sick after a visit to a nearby town where he had addressed a meeting of young people in his characteristic manner, advising them hard work, and plenty of it, was the lodestar to success.

"Work keeps a man in good health," he was fond of saying. "And when a man has good health he keeps at work. My rule for long life is moderation in all things. Clean habits, clean thoughts, plenty of exercise, fresh air and sunshine and plenty of work. And last but most important, fear God and keep His commandments."

These rules Capt. Dollar kept with the traditional tenacity of the Scotsman, for he was Scotch by birth, the son of a lumber dealer. His father took to drink after the death of Robert Dollar's mother, and the young man determined that he would never drink liquor. It is largely because of this dogged resolution that the ships of the Dollar Lines, although touching some of the alcoholically wettest spots on the globe, sold no liquor.

Around the World Line.

While still in his adolescence Mr. Dollar left his home for the New World, and eventually found his way into the lumber business in Canada, later coming to California to enter the lumber business on a large scale. This led him to shipping, as he needed carriers for his lumber. And in the course of time he entered overseas trade, making his first venture in that line by sending the 8,500-ton ship Arab to China in 1901.

Shipping eventually became his first love. He was nearly 80 years old when he started his around-the-world ship line in 1923, and went abroad himself to drum up business for it. These trips he repeated several times, the last time in his eighty-seventh year.

If Mr. Dollar could not book goods to fill his ships, he not infrequently bought merchandise outright, moving it to a market and selling at a profit, in addition to pocketing the freight money.

His ships, of which the President Coolidge and the President Hoover are the largest, carry the "$" on their stacks.

WOL Again Honors Virginia Sellars

Post's Winner of Recording Award Heard Second Time Over Station.

Miss Virginia Sellars, winner of the highest award in the amateur classification of The Washington Post's recent recording contest, last evening made her second appearance before the microphone when she sang on the "Post Recorders" program over Station WOL, at 5:45.

Miss Sellars is only 20 years old, and her voice is coloratura soprano. Until discovered through the medium of The Post contest, she had made no public appearances nor had she sung over the radio. Her voice on the tiny disc record, however, so impressed Fred Phaler, program director of WOL and one of the judges in The Post contest, that he persuaded her to sing on a program from that station Friday evening. This was followed by last evening's appearance under the sponsorship of The Washington Post.

The program also included harmonica selections played by Charles Loyette and piano selections by Robert Ruckman, who acted as Miss Sellar's accompanist.

Witnesses Called For McLean Trial

Hearing for Means Also Is Expected to Begin Swiftly.

(Associated Press.)

Witnesses in a suit to remove Edward B. McLean from cotrusteeship of his father's vast estate, including The Washington Post, were ordered yesterday to appear today for the trial. Justice Jennings Bailey postponed the start, scheduled for yesterday, to complete a case docketed ahead of the ouster proceeding in the District of Columbia Supreme Court.

Meanwhile, there appeared likelihood for swift trial of Gaston B. Means, who was indicted last week for embezzlement of $104,000 from Mrs. McLean, estranged wife of the publisher, in an alleged Lindbergh ransom fraud. Means also has been called as a witness for Mr. McLean.

He has until today to file new pleadings against embezzlement and larceny after trust indictments to which he answered "not guilty" when arraigned last week. Means' lawyer said yesterday he had found no errors against which to plead. Should Means fail to act, the prosecution would ask trial as soon as possible.

CANADA'S FIRE AREA IS CLOSED TO PUBLIC

Thousands Fight Blazes in Dozen Localities; Smoke Seen From Montreal.

Quebec, May 16 (A.P.).—While thousands of firemen, forest rangers and citizen volunteers strove desperately tonight to save imperiled towns in the paths of several serious forest fires, the government passed a decree closing certain timber areas to the public.

Today's fires, reported in a dozen localities, were the newest of 125 reported at the ministry of forestry since the opening of spring.

At North Bay, Ontario, major blazes menaced populated sections until controlled late in the day. More than 1,000 men fought off a fire that was moving before a strong wind against Kirkland Lake. A timely rainstorm aided them in getting the upper hand.

But the wind had torn up wire communications before the extent of the damage could be made known. Points north and south of the fire's center still were isolated.

The hamlet of Rosegrove, 10 miles from Swastika, in the Boston Creek area, was virtually erased from the map. The few inhabitants escaped with their personal effects.

Kirkland Lake is one of the Northland's principal mining towns. It was beset first by a west and then a south wind, which carried the flames to within a mile of the residence section.

From Manawaki and Gatineau, on the west, to Lake St. John and Riviere du Loup, on the east, the country is scarred with the remains of vast fires.

Rouyn and Noranda, in the northern mining belt, turned out their citizens today, and when night fell the fight against oncoming flames had not been won.

Burning woods nearby sent clouds of smoke over the City of Montreal. Three Rivers residents could see the sky illumination of a great forest tragedy to the north. The eastern townships and Quebec had been covered throughout the day with a blanket of smoke and ashes, in the midst of a scorching heat wave that did not help matters.

It was reported that flames had destroyed the shaft head at the Amulet Mine, 6 miles north of this city. A mile north, near the road to Makamik, a wide timber area was ablaze.

Armed Robber Faces Man at His Front Door

When Walter Keeler, of 703 Mount Vernon place northwest, answered a knock on his front door yesterday afternoon, he was confronted by a stranger pointing a gun at him and demanding his money.

He gave him $7.80, and as the man turned to leave, Keeler grabbed him by the coat and attempted to snatch the gun. The robber broke away and escaped after a chase of several blocks by the victim and pedestrians.

"THE AUTO GIRLS." A Burlesque revue, presented by Jimmy Lake, starring Dorothy DeHaven, Jeannette Allabassie, Billy Fields, "Chuck" Callahan and Bobby Vale. Reviewed by W. L. Wright.

In a sparkling revue billed as "The Auto Girls," Jimmy Lake has staged a winner that should fill all seats in his popular Ninth street playhouse. Gorgeous girls and snappy comedy, combined with pleasing songs, don't let the usual dull moments have a look-in.

Jeannette Allabassie has several excellent numbers. Also take a tip and don't miss Dorothy De Haven. She's a treat for sore eyes. And then the Reed Sisters, Gertrude and Gypsy Rae, are as satisfying as ever.

In addition to Billy Fields and "Chuck" Callahan, who have been keeping you convulsed for the past several weeks, Manager Lake offers Bobby Vale, a rotund comedian who deals the laughs in one-two-three order.

And as if that were not enough, Ray Parsons is back with his fine tenor voice to lend quality to an already splendid show.

GLEN ECHO PARK

Almost as great a crowd as attended the opening of Glen Echo Park flocked to the resort over the week-end Saturday, Sunday and yesterday.

The balmy May sunshine started the merrymakers on their way at noon Saturday and the trek to the park continued over last evening.

Those who visited the park for the first time found many innovations. The Old Mill is sporting some magnificent new scenery, rides have been pepped up, and the entire park improved. Visitors made a bee line for the roller coaster, the whip, airplane swings, dodgem rides and everything that moved, after which they inspected the new fun providers in the midway, shooting galleries, &c.

Saturday evening crowds enjoyed MacWilliams and his fine band in the beautiful ballroom, where the temperature is always delightful. Quite noticeable is the large number of family parties that make Glen Echo picnic headquarters, especially on Sunday, when the entire family can get together. There is no necessity to be burdened with baskets, as the park affords all kinds of refreshments.

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

FOLLOWING what has become its regular practice these past few years, although reinvoking its hot-weather policy a little earlier than usual this season, the Rialto Theater will close for the summer with the completion of the run of its current double bill composed of Lew Ayres and Mae Clarke, in "Night World," and Clarence Darrow's exposition of the "Mystery of Life."

This announcement was made from the executive offices of the Rialto yesterday afternoon.

While no specific reasons were given for this sudden move on the part of Universal, lessees of the Tom Moore property, it is the guess of this column that a paucity of feature pictures of Grade A merit precipitated the sudden move on the part of the management.

When "Radio Patrol," featuring Pat O'Brien, was announced last week as the attraction to follow "Night World," on Ninth street, it was believed that prints would be available in time to fulfill the booking, although considerably in advance of national release date. That has been found, however, not to be the case. "Radio Patrol" will not be ready, and, with nothing else of comparable merit in sight, it was decided to call it a season and put up the shutters until late summer or early fall.

The immediate plans of the Messrs. Ravenscroft, Collier and Wallach have not been made known, but I suspect the open road, the broad expanse of the Potomac, the baseball grounds and the boxing matches as probable places where they may be found!

Reverting momentarily to that conspicuously successful testimonial performance to the National Theater Players on Sunday night, it was, of course, entirely in consonance with the spirit of the evening that no orchestra occupied the pit, although seven musicians are being paid full salaries by the management and the members of the Players. All of the accompaniments were played on two pianos placed upon the stage.

And reverting, in turn, briefly to the closing of the Rialto Theater, it is an odd coincidence that Herb Gordon and his Whispering Orchestra, who furnished the instrumental embellishment of the bills on Ninth street when "name" acts were being featured—Lilyan Tashman, Dorothy Mackaill and Victor McLaglen—closes his season at Wardman Park with close of business next Saturday night.

A very sweet band, ladies and gentlemen, whether it whispers or performs at the top of its lungs!

Since we committed ourself on the injustices of the measure insofar as the motion picture industry is concerned, in last Sabbath's lead, it may be of interest that Representative William H. Stafford, of Milwaukee, Wis., unsuccessfully fought the passage of a bill making the contract-labor provision of the immigration laws applicable to actors, whether coming for permanent residence or for a temporary period to the United States.

Though an exception is made in the case of actors of "distinguished ability or merit," Stafford objected to the measure because it would cause American actors and workers in other fields to be discriminated against abroad and because it would bar from this country worthy, but not famous, actors who would provide artistic entertainment for Americans.

"I take the position," Mr. Stafford said in the House, "that art has no territorial boundaries and yet today you are trying to raise a barrier against persons who come here temporarily, not only for the purpose of seeking a livelihood, but for the prime purpose of entertaining the American public."

It was probably because Representative Stafford was entirely right in his stand that he was outvoted and the bill passed by the House!

While this was going on in the lower chamber, over on the Senate side Senator Shortridge, the genial gentleman, who once introduced Wesley "Freckles" Barry and his mother to President Harding for us—after which we had to introduce fifteen pages from the Senate, House and Supreme Court, acting as guard of honor, and whose names we scarcely knew—was issuing a statement anent the ubiquitous tax business, which read in part, as follows:

"More than 5,000 motion picture theaters in the United States have closed since 1929, due to unemployment's drain on regular movie attendance. If the proposed tax on admissions of 10 cents and over is enacted into law, at least another 5,000 will close their doors, unable to meet rent and pay rolls. The Nation's normal supply of entertainment will have been cut in half.

"The effect on producers and distributors, who depend on theater customers, will be a similar 50 per cent reduction of activity. It is proposed, through this tax, to complete the wiping out of at least half the industrial structure of a major industry. Half of the 325,000 Americans normally employed by the motion picture industry will be kept out of jobs. Half of the 1,250,000 constituting the families of these men will be without livelihood. Half of the 3,000,000 whose family heads are employed in normal times because of the motion picture industry's purchases from other industries, will further be added to the unemployment crisis. The revenue expected by the sponsors of the 10-cent admission tax will not materialize, and many normal tax values will be destroyed.

"No industry is more vital today than the motion-picture industry, fulfilling its necessary educational function and providing a let-off for care and worry. And no industry is in less position to bear an added crushing burden of taxation. * * * The Senate should, at least, agree with the House and fix the rate at 46 cents."

Senator Shortridge is so absolutely right that I stand in deadly fear of the vote on this, too!

The Rebecca Dial Studio Players will entertain the Congressional Club Friday, May 20, at its weekly tea. Miss Dial, it will be recalled, won the prize for diction in the 1930 District one-act play tournament.

Miss Janet Coon, charming and gifted young adopted Washingtonian, a hit this past season as an RKO-Keith stage artiste, will be the only entertainer tomorrow evening at the Iowa State Society's reception at the Willard, at which Mrs. Herbert Hoover will be the honor guest. Like Mrs. Hoover, and members of the society, Miss Coon is an Iowan, claiming Estherville as her Cornhusker State home.

Miss Coon graduated from Central High School in this city, taking part in many plays and entertainments during her student years, went to Hollywood in 1928 as guest of The Post, following her victory in a popularity contest—or was it personality?—then went on to New York to seek her theatrical fortune. And with no little success.

She sings and dances, but her most outstanding talent is her ability as a whistler. Though not quite 5 feet tall, and only 94 pounds "big," little Miss Coon is going to have the entire strength of the Navy Band accompanying her tomorrow night.

Well, she made a hit with Mary Pickford!

Let me see now, where did I put that 1926 Panama hat?

STIMSON, AT WHITE HOUSE, OPTIMISTIC ON ARMS PARLEY

The Secretary is now preparing a formal statement which he will make available within a new few days giving a resume of his stay in Geneva.

It is undertsood that the Secretary was frank in revealing the difficulties which the American delegation has has encountered ever since the conference opened. These difficulties were almost as discouraging politically as they were atmospherically since all of the members of the American delegation have been ill at one time or another with the notable exception of Senator Claude A. Swanson (Democrat), Virginia.

The personal experience which the Secretary derived from his successful handling of the London conference enabled him to meet the delegates of other nations this time at Geneva with quicker understanding of their problems. In Geneva, however, instead of sitting around the conference table with representatives of only four other nations, there were 54 represented.

Free From Cynicism.

On the margin of his disarmament negotiations there were necessary conversations on the Far Eastern developments which at some stages overshadowed the disarmament conversations. In view of the assassination of the Japanese premier on Sunday, this aspect of the Geneva conversations was particularly significant.

The American Secretary of State found the atmosphere in Geneva and in Paris singularly free from defeatism and from cynicism with regard to the success of the negotiations. Of course the imminence of election problems in France threatened to throw into the background the problems of the French delegation at Geneva. Now that the election issues have been decided, it is believed that the stage is set for definite constructive action on the more immediate points of the agenda.

The Secretary was especially gratified at the very definite advance in general principles which his personal contact with the European statesmen afforded. He was able to take up with Prime Minister MacDonald, with Foreign Minister Grandi and with the members of the French delegation, the various discussions at the point where they had been dropped at the last personal meeting between statesmen. He also talked with Chancellor Bruening, of Germany, and the Japanese delegate, Matsudaira.

Met Many Friends.

The tendency in international politics toward personal contacts works to the disadvantage of the country whose representatives are not clothed with sufficient authority to make their contributions in general conferences count. The presence of the American Secretary of State in Geneva enabled the United States to be represented in a fitting manner when it became necessary to take personal contacts on paramount issues.

The old friends of the Secretary of State like Italian Foreign Minister Grandi and Premier MacDonald flocked to Geneva even though they had not originally intended to attend at that time. The Secretary also was much impressed by the personality of Joseph Paul Boncour, the delegate of France to the conference, whose influence in international conferences particularly in view of the success of his colleague, Edouard Herriot, in the French elections, will undoubtedly go on increasing.

Other prominent European statesmen with whom the Secretary had several opportunities of discussing outstanding problems included Count Apponyi, the grand old man of Hungary; M. Benes, of Czechoslovakia; M. Paul Hymans, of Belgium; President Motta, of Switzerland, who took such a courageous stand in the Shanghai incident; the prime minister of Poland, M. Zaleski, and Judge Guerrero, of El Salvador.

Former Clown Brought Here on Bigamy Charge

A charge of bigamy was filed against Thomas B. Sanger, 49 years old, a former circus clown, who was returned from Baltimore yesterday by Headquarters Detective R. S. McCarthy. Sanger was arrested in his apartment in that city.

Sanger, a well known figure in unique advertising stunts for downtown stores here, was said to have married Bernardine Fereti, of Baltimore, on June 20, 1926, having already been married to Anna McSherry Brooks, of this city.

POLICE CHIEF SOLD RUM, COURT TOLD

Witness Also Says Mayor of Muncie Accepted Gift of Whisky.

Indianapolis, May 16 (A.P.).—Sixteen witnesses, most of them admitted bootleggers, testified in Federal court today at the trial of George R. Dale, Mayor of Muncie, Ind., and ten others, charged with conspiracy to violate the prohibition act.

Corbett Johnson, the only person of those indicted to plead guilty, described to the jury what he said was a purchase of confiscated alcohol from Frank Massey, Muncie chief of police in 1930. He said the alcohol was transferred to large jugs and the original containers then were filled with water. This was done, Johnson testified, so the officer could make a gesture of pouring out the alcohol.

Johnson said while Massey was acting as campaign manager for Dale prior to his appointment as chief of police, Massey promised Johnson was to have "full swing of the liquor business and that all downtown places where liquor was sold would be closed."

After the election, Johnson testified, Dale and Massey visited his place and he gave them each a quart of whisky. On cross-examination he admitted Dale remained outside in an automobile and that he gave the whisky to Massey.

The witness also told of paying Massey $20 a week to keep him "fixed" with the Delaware County prosecutor.

Clifton Cranor, coal dealer, another witness, told of liquor at the Muncie headquarters in Indianapolis during the 1930 State Democratic convention. He said Dale and Massey were in the room but that he did not see them drink.

Soon after his indictment, Dale carried to the Attorney General at Washington a complaint that the charges against him were a "frame-up."

At this time, the end of the first half of the eighth spring and summer season, the National Theater Players should be demonstrating their full power. And the way in which the players presented "Tiger Rose," Willard Mack's drama of the great Northwest, has more than justified this assumption.

Not only is the play in itself one of the most difficult that the players have yet tried, because of the language employed and a dramaturgic treatment that borders on the outmoded, but largely because of the reputation attached to the original production—the play that finally clinched Lenore Ulric's claim to stardom, 'way back when she spelled it Ulrich.

Employing many of those motifs that the late entrepreneur, David Belasco, under whose banner the play first saw the boards, was so adept at presenting—the intense love of a man and a maid; an equally intense and consuming passion for revenge—coupled with the deathless appeal of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police and their ability to "get their man," this play offers the entire roster of players the opportunity as perhaps no other play has to date.

In the Ulric role is, of course, Leona Powers, who gives to the character of Rose Bocion a dramatic fire and force that dominate every act, a vivid—even livid—delineation that leaves nothing to be desired. No wonder, with such a part!

With the least he has had to do up to this time, Donald Woods acquits himself nobly as the young engineer who is fleeing justice for a murder committed in revenge. He does not appear until late in the second act, but he more than makes up for his earlier absence by the quality of his work in the remaining scenes.

Taking the part of Father Thibault with no less conviction than he gave to an earlier gangster role, Forrest Orr delivers himself of another of his sterling delineations. Like "Rain," of whose dramatic climatological effects this play's timely second-act deluge is reminiscent, there is a philosophical doctor, here played by John Kline in a quiet and unassuming, yet telling, manner.

As guardian of Rose, and keeping an ever-watchful eye on her welfare, is Burke Clarke, a much bewhiskered Scotsman with a burr that sort of takes the edge off either (or both) the Irish twang of Raymond Bramley or the happily assumed "Canuck" accent of Miss Powers.

Mentioning Mr. Bramley last in no way indicates that he is the least of the cast. This ubiquitous combination of all novelistic detectives rolled into a Mountie is both so well played and seen on the stage so much that he comes at times dangerously close to stealing the show.

The other members of the cast—J. Martin Scranage, Frank S. Peck, Arthur Rhodes, Adelaide Hibbard, Karl Neilson and Owen Davis, jr.—have parts of varying importance, yet played with a finish in no way dependent upon the number of "sides."

Not only has Charles Squires constructed two more of his excellent sets, but their effect is further enhanced by fine work by the boys on the switchboard—and the water spigots—In fact, a more convincing rainstorm has not been heard outside of the real thing!

Thus, as the fifth week of the Nats' season gets under way, David Belasco can look down from that particular niche reserved for the theater's great and contemplate the Players in "Tiger Rose" and say, "Well done, good and faithful servants."

Mrs. Magna to Be Honor Guest.

Mrs. Russell William Magna, of Holyoke, Mass., newly elected president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, will be the guest of honor today at the weekly luncheon of the Women's National Press Club in the cabinet room of the Willard Hotel.

Workers Urged to Increase Efforts to Attain Goal of $50,000.

With little more than $10,000 raised, workers in the United Jewish campaign were urged yesterday to intensify their efforts during the remaining days of the $50,000 for Eastern European relief and Palestine reconstruction. Dr. Abram Simon and Isidore Hershfield, cochairman of the drive, addressed the workers at a luncheon at the Jewish Community Center.

Among the larger contributions reported yesterday were the following: Hecht & Co., $500; Paul Himmelfarb, $500; Fred S. Gichner, $125; Giles F. Heilperin, $125; Harold H. Levi, $100; William Hahn & Co., $100, and George Beneman, $100.

Contributions of $50 each were received from Dr. David Davis, Mrs. James Lansburgh, I. S. Turover, Dr. M. T. Bengman, Benjamin Ourisman, Harry Viner, Mrs. Sadie Groaner, Abraham Kay, Charles Schwartz and Connecticut Pie Co.

Preparations are being made for Sunday night's banquet, at which Nahum Sokolow, president of the World Zionist Organization and foremost Jewish historian, will be the principal speaker. Other speakers will be Jehudai Kaufman, of Palestine, and James Marshall, of the joint distribution committee, the largest Jewish relief agency. Mrs. John M. Safer is chairman of the banquet committee.

NATS BOW TO BROWNS, 2-0, LOSING LEAD

This Morning with Shirley L. Povich

THESE be parlous times indeed for the Washington Ball Club, which has seen its winning streak collide with the impenetrable pitching of the St. Louis Browns with painful if not disastrous effect, but, as the man who had just been flattened by the front wheels of a steamroller, said, the worst is yet to come.

The Nats have found the Browns unpleasant playmates during the last two days, but the St. Louis Club is just a bunch of little Fauntleroys compared to the company the Nats must keep later in the week. I mean that starting Thursday, Washington must meet the rampaging New York Yankees in the Yanks' own back yard in five games in three days, and if that isn't a test, the right word has escaped this department.

But that isn't all. The Nats are not done with the Yankees after next Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The New York Club invades Griffith Stadium for four games the following week to make it nine games in eleven days, and it seems as if the schedule makers have conspired to put an early end to the ambitions of either the Yankees or the Nats.

Seldom have two accepted contenders met in such a protracted series as faces the New York and Washington Clubs, and anything besides an approximately even break is liable to ruin the aspirations of one or the other. Both teams will be on their mettle at this early stage of the proceedings and the club that comes off second best in the skirmishing may be a long time recovering from the effects, if ever.

While the Nats and the Yanks are attempting to cut each other's throats, the situation presents a wide-open opportunity for the Athletics to take advantage of the leaders' battle and make up much of the ground that has been lost by the champions this early in the campaign.

But the suspicion is growing, and well-founded, that the Mackmen can't win unless Grover or Earnshaw is in the box, and sometimes not even then. The two power boys of Connie Mack's pitching staff can't be in there every day, however, and the Athletics are fading as a threat. It is the Yankees whom the Nats must beat, and the Nats whom the Yankees must subdue.

The Yankees are the surprise of this American League pennant race despite the Nats' late and lamented league lead. Not in the consistency of their victories, but in the manner that they have been achieved, have the Yanks sent the dope bucket sprawling this season.

Manager Joe McCarthy hasn't relied on the power boys of his batting order to bag the games for the Yankees this season. It hasn't been necessary. The Yankees are presenting a new and surprising front with their pitching staff, whereas slug and superslug has been the chief characteristic of the New York club ever since Babe Ruth joined the team in 1919.

Mr. McCarthy's pitchers, be it known, have just succeeded in equaling the American League record of four consecutive shutouts set by the Cleveland Indians in 1903 and registered three years later by the Boston Red Sox. In turn, Johnny Allen blanked the Browns with five hits; George Pipgras shut out the White Sox with four hits; Red Ruffing applied the same dose to the Cleveland Indians on Sunday, and yesterday Senor Lefty Gomez whitewashed the Indians again with five hits.

If that isn't pitching, Walter Johnson was a short stop. Mr. McCarthy seems to have quite considerable of a hurling department what with Young Allen coming along to supplement such accomplished performers as Gomez, Ruffing and Pipgras. The Nats know Mr. Allen. He allowed them exactly no hits in a five-inning relief shift a week ago Sunday.

This department detects a gleam of hope for the Nats despite the puerile performance of the batting order in the last two games with the Browns which netted the Washington club four hits and three hits, respectively, with a sum total of no runs.

The Nats' pitching hasn't fallen down. Previous to the collapse against the Browns, the Nats had a five-game winning streak and the last two games were lost by scores of 1-0 and 2-0. That isn't bad pitching. But it is rather rotten hitting. However, the Nats are not calculated to rest in the batting ruck. Guys like Myer, Manush, West, Cronin and Reynolds can hit and probably will.

And don't forget that in four games with the Yankees so far, the Nats have won three.

Godwin Given Draw With Banovic

New York Boxer Is Aggressor; Tow Stops Mathews.

By JACK ESPEY.

WEATHERING a lethal punch that flattened him in the very first minute, Bob Godwin, Southern light heavyweight champion, fought his way back from the borders of dreamland to earn a draw with Bingo Joe Banovic last night in Portner Arena.

Referee Charlie Short rendered the verdict on this eight-round bout that kept 1,700 patrons of the Alexandria Day Nursery in a constant uproar.

But the determined Southerner had the phsical condition and the fighting spirit to snap out of the fog, and snap out he did with a two-fisted attack that inflicted plenty of punishment on the Banovic's rugged body.

Godwin Comes Up Fighting.

Before Referee Short had counted one, Godwin seemed to have cleared up mentally, and as the official tolled off the numbers up to eight, he rested on one knee, meanwhile grinning and saluting the swarthy New Yorker as if to say: "Well, Joe, you really let me have it that time."

Godwin got up fighting and never stopped throughout the eight rounds. As a matter of fact, it required all of his strength and generalship to escape a defeat, for Banovic, a rough, tough Slav from Binghamton, N. Y., continually tore into him, swinging for a knockout.

Banovic, suffering a disadvantage in height and reach, fought the only way he could under the circumstances, but his rushing tactics met up with a superb brand of counterfighting that Godwin executed for innumerable clean blows to both body and head.

In the close-range exchanges, Godwin's punches had more steam and, when he wasn't punching, the Georgian gave his opponent a lesson in the fine points of defense. Banovic often found himself completely at a loss to land a blow as Godwin rolled, dodged and danced around with Chester Haliah grace.

Banovic's best rounds were the first, second, sixth and final, but only in the first was his margin clear. Godwin staggered him in the fourth after having warmed to the battle in the preceding round, and in the fifth and seventh the Dixie lad dealt many resounding shots to Banovic's ribs.

Bob Tow, Godwin's 183-pound sparring partner, knocked out Kid Mathews, Baltimore veteran, in the third chapter of the scheduled eight-round semifinal. A left to the midriff stopped Mathews after two minutes 40 seconds of the round.

Henry Irving, Northeast slugger, deposited Sammy Britt, Philadelphia, outside the ropes in winning a four-round decision, while in other bouts of the same duration Doug Swetman, local feather, outpointed Soldier Ran. Roy "Kid" Manley, St. Louis lightweight, defeated Jesse Belt, Washington, and Joe Raspi, Baltimore lightweight, conquered Marino Marini, Washington.

Small American Group To Seek British Open

London, May 16 (A.P.).—The smallest American professional golf delegation in years, numbering only three top-flight players and minus Walter Hagen, four times winner of the title, has been entered for the forthcoming British open at Sandwich.

The list of entries released today for the tournament, which begins June 6, showed only fourteen American names. Tommy Armour, defending champion; Macdonald Smith and Gene Sarazen are the only real threats to a British victory.

Walter Hagen said, in Detroit, he had cabled a last-minute entry to London, but the lists have been closed and it would be against British precedent to reopen them.

Boston, May 16 (A.P.).—The Chicago White Sox defeated the Boston Red Sox, 4 to 3, in ten innings when Luke Appling and Charlie Berry drove out doubles to break a 3-to-3 tie.

The winning run was scored off Jack Russell, who went to the mound in place of Ed Durham in the ninth.

Smead Jolley accounted for the three Boston runs with two home runs, the second coming in the ninth with McManus on base.

Yankees Win 4th Shutout By 8 to 0

26-Year-Old Record Tied as Indians Bow to Gomez.

N. Y. Hurler Yields But 5 Hits; Receives Fine Support.

NEW YORK, May 16 (A.P.).—The Yankees continued to get sensational pitching today, Lefty Gomez setting the Cleveland Indians down, 8 to 0, for the team's fourth consecutive shutout victory.

The feat of the Yankee mound staff in holding the opposition runless in four straight contests ties an American League record that has existed for 26 years. The Boston Red Sox last turned the trick in 1906, while Cleveland had performed the feat in 1903.

With 40 scoreless innings behind them, the Yankee curvers need only 1 more to tie Cleveland's mark of 41. The National League record for consecutive shutouts is six.

Yanks Take Over League Lead.

As a result of today's triumph, their seventh in a row, the Yankees took over first place in the American League, displacing by a few percentage points the Washington Senators, who lost to St. Louis.

Gomez granted only five hits and received inspired support in the few instances the Indians threatened to score. Earl Combs made several great catches in the outfield to cut off scoring chances and drove in four Yankee runs with a single and a triple. Gomez himself drove in two runs with a double.

Chicago, May 16 (A.P.).—Riggs Stephenson's single with the bases loaded in the ninth today gave the Cubs an 11 to 10 victory over Philadelphia, and boosted their league-lead margin over the idle Boston Braves to a game and a half.

The Cubs trailed going into their ninth as a result of homers by Chuck Klein and Hal Lee in the visiting half, the latter's being his second of the game.

George, Sherry on Outdoor Bolling Field Card Tonight

Stars of Bowser Circuit to Show Wares in New Stadium; Malcewicz Will Battle Dr. Meyers.

WASHINGTON'S first outdoor wrestling show of the season will be held tonight at Bolling Field, with several of Bowser cliques best ex- and uncrowned champions in feature bouts. The show will start at 8:30 o'clock, a miniature wooden stadium, seating 2,500, having been erected in a corner of the big airport.

The feature bout concerns Ed Don George, who won his championship by beating Gus Sonnenberg after Sonnenberg had beaten Lewis. George, in time, was beaten by Lewis, who lost to Henri De Glane when he sank a brown fang into the French-Canadian's arm on his home mat.

George's opponent tonight is Danny Winters, who seems to be the most popular of young matmen appearing at Bolling. Winters has not been defeated, of course, in recent weeks. He does a great deal of flying tackling and seems to take many chances with his neck.

Jack Sherry, ranking No. 1 uncrowned champion of the Bowser boys, also is booked for a finish match tonight. Sherry, noted for his tremendous strength, the ease with which he tosses all opponents and the eye trouble which has caused the skin almost to obscure his pupils, is programmed to engage Ivan Padubney, said to be both Russian and strong.

Joe Malcewicz, second ranking uncrowned champion, has to do tonight with Dr. Fred Meyers. Malcewicz is one of the fastest men in the business. Much lighter than the customary 200 pounds, at which he is represented by fond announcers, Malcewicz handles mountainous men with a combination jiu jitsu and nimble rassling that is generally successful.

The "fight," which is an increasingly hackneyed form of entertainment to pep up mat cards, will be staged by two lumbering, pugnacious old boys, "Booooooo!" Martin and Charley Strack.

Mrs. Haynes' 83 Tops Field In District Golf Qualifying

By HENRY LITCHFIELD WEST.

THE women's District golf championship opened yesterday on the course of the Manor Club with an eighteen-hole qualifying round, the remainder of the field to play a similar round today. Among yesterday's competitors, Mrs. J. Marvin Haynes, of the Columbia Club, Middle Atlantic champion and former District champion, easily spreadeagled the field with a card of 40—43—83, the only player to break 90.

Mrs. Betty P. Meckley, the present District titleholder, has been incapacitated for some time with a sprained back, but it is hoped that she will be able today to enter the tournament and defend her title.

While Mrs. Haynes' 83 was the envy of all the other players, she was somewhat dissatisfied, as all good golfers are, because she had not broken 80, recalling that she had missed no less than six putts which were over 5 or 6 feet in length. However, she had in all only 35 putts, with one three-putt and one one-putt green.

She started with an indifferent 6 on the first hole, although it is a par 5 for men, when she lost one stroke by being compelled to play out of the woods, and altogether she had five 6s on her card, due to overapproaches and her one unfortunate three-putt. Her one-putt green gave her a birdie deuce on the second hole. Her card:

Out ..... 6 3 5 5 4 4 4 3 6—40
In ..... 6 2 5 5 4 6 5 4 6—43—83

At the conclusion of the qualifying round today all the players will be paired for match play. There will be three sixteens, and the fourth and fifth flights will be in eights. In other words, every contestant who turns in a card will qualify. There were 56 cards turned in yesterday, and with the field today the probability is that there will be five flights.

With the cards submitted yesterday there were eighteen with 104 and under listed for the championship flight, but the outlook is that after today's play nothing over 101 or 102 will qualify in the first sixteen. The eighteen leaders yesterday were:

Mrs. J. Marvin Haynes, Columbia	40	43	83
Mrs. Everett Eynon, Columbia	44	46	90
Miss Winifred Faunce, Manor	43	48	91
Mrs. Dorothy White Nicolson, unattached	49	43	92

Macks Bow Again To Detroit by 6-4

Philadelphia, May 16 (A.P.).—The Detroit Tigers staged a five-run rally in the fourth inning today to take the opener of the series with the Athletics, 6 to 4. Rogell's home run off Walberg in the seventh provided the extra counters.

Vic Sorrell, after being walloped for seven hits and four runs in the first three innings, whitewashed the Mackmen the rest of the distance. Sugar Cain, rookie right hander, was driven out of the box during the Tigers' uprising in the fourth inning.

St. Louis Veteran Holds Washington to 3 Hits To Beat Weaver in Duel

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

GOOSE eggs may figure prominently in the lives of geese and undoubtedly would save the life of a starving man, but they do not win ball games if taken in large and consistent doses. Following nine doled out by the St. Louis Browns Sunday, another nine was handed the Nationals yesterday, the result being that Manager Walter Johnson's charges were beaten, 2 to 0, and not only lost the game but, by a trick of the percentage figures, their American League lead, although actually they still have a half-game margin over the New York Yankees, who knocked them off of the top rung of the ladder.

DAISABURO'S LATE SPURT WINS PIMLICO CLOSING FEATURE

Keiffer Colt Pays $13.30 In Upset

Preakness 'Also Ran' Defeats Pencader by a Length.

Bertrano, Plain Ben Also Score Surprises Last Day.

By WALTER HAIGHT
(Post Staff Correspondent).

PIMLICO RACE TRACK, May 16.—Daisaburo failed to win the Preakness, but the son of Rustic and Ilaria found a race on today's charity program that he fancied and, under clever handling by little Danny Meade, earned winning brackets by a length margin. Pencader, the favorite, was second, ahead of Open Hearth.

Summer-like weather and the last chance to witness the bangtails in action on a major track until fall brought out a crowd of some 10,000. The betting was above the average for a week day at this meeting and considerably topped last year's charity day.

The field in the feature was held at the post for some five minutes, due to the bad manners of Open Hearth. However, Starter Milton had several chances to let the field go in perfect alignment, but seemed unwilling to give Open Hearth the benefit of walking up. An assistant starter finally backed the Labrot colt into the stall and Open Hearth was high in the air, on his back feet, as the field left.

Pipe Dream Sets Early Pace.

Pipe Dream set the first pace, followed by Pencader and Daisaburo. Pencader went to the front as the far turn neared, with Daisaburo following close and Open Hearth coming up on the outside. They stayed this way to the stretch turn, where Daisaburo forged to the front and Jimmy Smith cut in on the rail with Open Hearth.

Daisaburo, with Danny Meade hustling him, drew away during the final sixteenth. Open Hearth gained some ground.

Nahunta, backed by Owner Mrs. T. H. Somerville, Trainer Preston Burch and Jockey Buddy Hanford—a trio which has figured prominently in racing at Pimlimo—won the first race from a field of a dozen juveniles. The three youngsters on the rail broke in a flying groupp, with Nahunta taking the lead to outstay Nutting, a field entry, and Aleeta in a stretch drive.

The Coldstream Stud produced the winner of the second race when the son of Pot au Feu defeated Peturnal and Nemero. Peturnal went to the front at the rise of the barrier, but Bertrano caught the Barry Vail Stable hope at the stretch turn and drew away to an easy victory.

Plain Ben and Danny Meade proved a winning combination in the third race. Plucky Girl drove up to take the second money by a nose from Worthington. The last-named, the favorite, had too much taken out of him when Jimmy Smith was forced to pull up at the clubhouse turn, the field crowding him into the rail.

JOE AND ASBESTOS

(Watch Sunday's Post for New Secret Code) —By Ken Kling

Asbestos hit another winner yesterday when Sun Fire cashed at Churchill Downs, paying $5.08. All tracks look alike to him. The roll went up $4.16 and is now $27.85. Joe's handicaping system again went over with a bang the sixth straight time, yielding 3 winners out of 6 picks yesterday and his roll showed a profit of $7.50. A flat $5 bet on all choices so far shows $157.50 profit. Today's code is 10, 15, 2, 4, 2 at Churchill.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NAHUNTA, $6.30, $4.50, $2.60; NUTTING (field), $14.00, $4.50; ALEETA, $3.20.

NAHUNTA, quickest to get going and vigorously handled from the beginning, saved ground whenever possible and outstayed NUTTING under stiff pressure. Latter, in nearest pursuit, and a stout factor from the break, continued stubbornly when placed to punishment. ALEETA, forced to come to the outside of the leaders, came willingly approaching the finish. SYRINX was racing gamely in the final drive, but could not menace the leaders. MARION T. lacked early speed and was held safe. DONNA LINDA was making up ground steadily in the final stages. BUSY IKE went very wide around the turn.

SECOND RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $700; allowances. The Youthful (first division). For 2-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 2:36. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BERTRANO, $13.90, $7.00, $3.90; PETURNAL, $4.70, $3.10; NEMERC, $3.10.

BETRANO, ridden hard from the start, reached PETURNAL when straightened away into the home stretch, bore over on the pacemaker when taking command and came away steadily under urging. PETURNAL displayed good speed for a half mile and then tired fast. NEMERC, meeting with interference directly after the break, secured racing room leaving the back stretch and showed a good test. SEMERCO, unable to assume a forward position early, was racing stoutly nearing the finish. LOWN SQUARE was outrun. ROYAL DURBAR was held safe. GOOD FAIRY displayed early speed. GAMMA DELTA boited to the outside when rounding the turn. TIGER CAT was pulled up after the start.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PLAIN BEN (A. Hullcoat entry), $19.70, $8.10, $4.10; PLUCKY GUY, $9.40, $4.10; WORTHINGTON, $2.70.

PLAIN BEN, racing close to PLUCKY GIRL, displaced the latter after six furlongs, responded stoutly for the final drive and, continuing resolutely, was under strong pressure until the end. PLUCKY GIRL relinquished command when midway of the far turn, continued on the inside and, coming again under punishment, was steadily wearing the winner down. WORTHINGTON moved strongly leaving the back stretch, drew on practically even terms with the winner at the final furlong pole, but kept bearing out all during the final furlong while tiring. TREWS worked his way up gamely after being shuffled back at the first turn. TUFFY G closed in big gap. I. W. HENDRICK raced with menace then tired early; as did DAY DREAMER.

FOURTH RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $700; allowances. The Youthful (second division). For 2-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:37. Off at 3:40. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GARDEN MESSAGE, $3.70, $3.30, $2.30; LOUGH PORT, $8.90, $3.40; BALLYGRAN, $2.40.

GARDEN MESSAGE, forced to race on the outside for racing room, entered contention with rush when approaching the home stretch and, wearing LOUGH PORT down gradually, was up in the final sixteenth mile. LOUGH PORT, a quick beginner, raced MADAME SNOB and ILCHESTER into defeat and fought it out gamely when the real test came. BALLYGRAN, hard ridden throughout, finished with good energy. MADAME SNOB weakened fast in the closing furlong. LATIFOLIA raced well. SNOWDRIFT was always outrun. FLORA CANTER stumbled and fell when the break came.

DAISABURO, forwardly placed and racing under steadying restraint for the first six furlongs, moved up stoutly to the pacemaker when taking command and came away steadily under urging. PETURNAL displayed good speed for a half mile and then tired fast. NEMERC, meeting with interference directly after the break, secured racing room leaving the back stretch and showed a good test. SEMERCO, unable to assume a forward position early, was racing stoutly nearing the finish. TOWN SQUARE was outrun. ROYAL DURBAR was held safe. GOOD FAIRY displayed early speed. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WISE COUNT, $2.90, $2.60, $2.50; BLACK BOARD, $4.60, $3.80; GALA FLIGHT, $5.20.

WISE COUNT, rushed to the front in the opening furlong, raced GALA FLIGHT into submission, saved ground, but was forced to be kept under pressure in stall of BLACK BOARD. Latter, outrun early, swung to the outside for the final drive and closed resolutely. GALA TIME displayed good early speed and continued willingly when forced to a drive. GUIDE RIGHT saved ground the entire trip, but could not threaten the leaders. JOHNNY went well for five furlongs. FERVOR was outrun and was never dangerous under his impost. The others were held safe.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:12. Off at 5:12½. Winner, H. I. TARNISH, very sluggish in the early racing, moved up in the final half mile and, coming resolutely when taken to the outside for the stretch run, was up in the last sixteenth mile. JODHPUR went into contention with a rush, assumed command at the final furlong pole, but hung approaching the finish. ANGRY LASS worked her way up on the inside and closed with good courage. TULACH ARD was used up racing TUSCAN KNIGHT into defeat and faltered badly in the final test.

A. A. U. TRACK MEET TONIGHT

Byrd Stadium Is Scene of Games

Burke, Williams and Other National Stars to Compete.

D. C. Championships at Stake in Night Track Meet.

STAGED with the double design of establishing the track and field champions of the District, and providing a source of revenue to the District Olympic finance committee, the District A. A. U. games will be held tonight at Maryland University, beginning at 8 o'clock, with a splendid field of performers aiding the presentation of this region's first night track meet.

Representatives from the "big time" of trackdom, including Jake Edwards, of Penn; Bill Agee, of Baltimore; Lieut. George Lermond, former West Point distance ace; Gleason, Villanova streak, and Leigh Williams, former Southern Conference quarter, miler of distinction, are entered. They will appear in special events, aside from the closed-to-District-men contests, but should go far toward making the games one of the sporting events of the year.

Celebrities in Four Events.

Four events have been set aside for the out-of-town celebrities. They are the 400 meter, the 400 meter hurdles, the 100-meter dash and the 5,000-meter run. Of these it is difficult to choose a feature, but competition is certain to burn at a high pitch in the 400-meter event, in which Edwards will be called upon to breast a field of 10 starters, among them the cream of local and nearby quarter-milers. Something well under 50 seconds is expected of the winner.

The 5,000-meter event will bring Agee into the limelight, pressed by a fine field, including an Army-Navy duel between Lermond and Ensign F. E. Highley.

Since tonight's is to be the first A. A. U. track meet ever held here, it will usher into the local sports world competition between high school and college boys, whereas definite lines of demarcation have heretofore been drawn. Foremost of the intracity events should be the hurdles races. Three men stand out in these events, Vincent Fraatz, of Catholic University; Willard Pickett, of Maryland, and Bob Slye, of Eastern High.

Tickets may be secured at Byrd Stadium for $1 and 50 cents. The former are reserved seats. The program of events follows:

ORDER OF EVENTS.

9:10 p. m.—5,000-meter invitation.

Miss Lawrence Is Beaten by 1931 Champion.

Miss Bates' margin of victory over the girl who will compete in Olympic high-board tryouts later this year, was scored by the margin of 102.2 to 99.5. Lenore Tauber, who won the District indoor high-board title, in which neither Miss Bates nor Miss Lawrence competed, finished third. All are members of the Shoreham Swimming Club.

Johnny Broaddus, who also holds the District A. A. U. 145-pound wrestling championship, won the men's event, followed by Gale Heslop, of George Washington University, and Vincent Gomez. Broaddus was rated at 122.66, while Heslop and Gomez were separated by the record-breaking margin of 117.72 to 117.22.

Tied neck and neck until after the finish of the compulsory dives, Lois Bates won her title prematurely on the first optional dive when she hit the green water of the pool like a pointed plummet after a difficult front one-and-one-half. Miss Lawrence, evidently nervous, did not go in so smoothly, although her aerial maneuvers were flawless.

MARYLAND U. NINE BEATS VA., 9-5

Outhit, but Cavaliers' Errors Aid in Old Line Victory.

UNIVERSITY OF MARYLAND'S baseball team closed its home season by vanquishing its old rival, Virginia, 9 to 5, yesterday at College Park.

Peck Luck, Virginia pitcher, had a lot of luck, all bad. Maryland was outhit by Virginia, 10 to 8, but made its bingles count heavily. Its first five runs, two of which were scored in the opening inning and the other three in the third, came on only two hits, several walks, errors and a hit batsman, playing a part.

It was not until the sixth that the Cavaliers were able to score off Steve Physioc. Then they mixed two hits with a walk to count one tally. In the eighth the Old Liners ran the score to 9 to 1, when they chased over four runs. Virginia rallied courageously in the ninth when Pinch-Hitter Chick Brewer slammed a homer with one on to start a four-run rally. Until this inning, in which Virginia got five hits, the Cavaliers were able to do little with Physioc's offerings.

Eastern-Western Nines Play Today

Lincoln Park Team May Clinch Fifth Straight Series Crown.

The Eastern High School Baseball team has a chance today to achieve a record never duplicated in recent high school sports history when it engages Western High at 3:30 o'clock at Eastern Field. It is the next to last game of the high school series.

With three victories already tucked under its arm, another win today in its final series appearance would give Eastern its fifth consecutive pennant, and its 22d straight series game.

As a precautionary measure Coach Chuck Guyon is expected to nominate Dick Lanahan, the outstanding high school pitcher, Western's diamond mentor, Cliff Moore, must needs call upon Bill Payne, who stands next to Lanahan in effectiveness this season.

Eastern has the edge in batting, with Fitzpatrick, Nolan, Lanahan and Pusateri all batting well over .300. Western chief threat at the plate and afield is Reds Mulloch, scrappy little first baseman.

Central and Tech will play the final series game Thursday.

Schmeling-Sharkey Winner for Walker

After due and solemn negotiations, the Garden announced Kearns had signed for Walker to meet the winner in 1933, providing that six months before the bout Walker still retains "his present prominence in the heavyweight ranks."

The Garden said Kearns posted a $25,000 check to bind his side of the bargain.

Spain Wins Over Italy In Davis Cup Doubles

Rome, May 16 (A.P.).—Spain today defeated Italy at doubles in their Davis Cup series to continue the match another day. Italy won the first two singles matches.

Ernest Maier, Spain's ranking star, and Jose Tejada paired to defeat A. Del Bono and Count di Minerbi, 6—2, 6—2, 6—4.

Maier dominated the play throughout, scoring frequent service aces, and was well supported by Tejada.

Warsaw, Poland, May 16 (A.P.).—Poland completed its Davis Cup conquest of Holland yesterday in the final two singles matches to take the series, four matches to one, and enter the third round of European play, where it will meet England.

TEAHOUSE SLAYING TRIAL POSTPONED

Simone Still in Hospital Here Suffering From Wounds He Received in Gun Fight.

The trial of Thomas Simone, of Philadelphia, indicted for murder in the Bladensburg roadhouse shooting last fall, was yesterday postponed at Upper Marlboro indefinitely because Simone is still in a Washington hospital suffering from wounds he received in the gun battle.

Simone, who is represented by Attorney Robert W. McCullough, was indicted jointly with Peter Abbott. Last week Abbott's attorney, J. Frank Lillard, asked for and received a severance and a change of venue for his client.

Sam Davis, colored, indicted for assault with intent to commit a statutory offense, assault with intent to kill and assault and battery on Mrs. Anita Doyle, asked to be tried by the court on the latter two charges. His attorney filed a demurrer against the first charge, and Davis will not plead until the demurrer has been decided. Mrs. Doyle was attacked with a hatchet at her lonely home back of the University of Maryland last March.

A jury decided that Arthur McCormick and James Murphy were not guilty of storebreaking and larceny from Samuel Lagona, of Capitol Heights, but convicted two other youths who were indicted jointly with the acquitted pair. William Ball was found guilty of storebreaking, larceny and receiving stolen goods, while Roberts was convicted of receiving stolen goods. The prisoners were defended by Attorneys Thomas J. Luckett, J. Wilson Ryon, Caesar L. Aiello and George Merrick.

Chevy Chase Golf Play Starts Today

The course of the Chevy Chase Club was crowded yesterday afternoon with golfers who will compete in the club's annual spring invitation tournament which begins today with nearly 400 entrants. The first pair is scheduled to start at 7:30 this morning and there will be a constant procession of twosomes until the last pair tees off at 3:40 this afternoon.

Tomorrow the remainder of the field will play the qualifying round of eighteen holes, with the last pair starting about the same time. Only four sixteens—64 in all—will be eligible to qualify and the strength of the field today and tomorrow insures a score well under 90 for those who hope to become eligible for the match play which starts on Wednesday morning.

Reckless Driving Costs Man $240 at Hyattsville Hearing

The driver of an automobile which crashed through a fence and tore up a loading platform and several lamp posts in Hyattsville at the end of a 7-mile chase was given the maximum fine on charges of reckless driving and one of the highest fines ever imposed for speeding in Hyattsville police court yesterday.

The prisoner was Rutherford B. Mason, of 43 Rhode Island avenue northwest. For speeding at more than 60 miles per hour he was fined $125, and the maximum penalty of $100 for reckless driving was imposed. He was fined $10 more for failing to reduce speed on a turn and $5 for failing to keep to the right. Charges of driving while drunk were dismissed.

J. B. SMITH RESIGNS TAKOMA PARK POST

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 9103 Conn. Ave., North Chevy Chase, Md. Telephone Wisconsin 4206.

Decrying the atmosphere of partisan politics engendered into the recent Takoma Park town elections by "a small group of Republican politicians," J. Bond Smith last night tendered his resignation as corporation counsel and delegate to the Montgomery County Civic Federation. He had been made an honorary member of the federation last week when he announced his intention of resigning.

Mr. Smith presented a 25-page letter to the town council in which he took each plank of the platform of the "Nonpartisan Committee for Home Rule in Takoma Park," which put forth several circulars opposing Mayor Ben Davis' candidacy. He asserted that had the corrupt practices act been applicable to town elections, the people of the town would have been able to identify those who were waging the campaign for selfish reasons.

He stated that the Republican group, "who for reasons best known to themselves wished to conceal their identity from public scrutiny, engaged in one of the most shameful campaigns of misrepresentation regarding the conduct of the town's affairs by Mayor Davis which has ever disgraced and shocked this community. Playing upon every item of neighborhood irritation or fancied grievance, upon every unrealized ambition for public office, lucrative or otherwise, and upon every unsatisfied wish for personal or institutional preferment or advantage, this anonymous Republican group secured unthinking converts in their efforts to mislead and deceive the citizens of the town respecting town affairs," he said.

He pointed out that rather than having received an unduly small return for their taxes from the State and county, the people of Takoma Park have received more than they paid in public improvements since the accession to office of the Democratic administration in power. He further pointed out that the rights of the town had been guarded jealously by the administration, even to the point of giving some rights that other towns do not have. He declared that he plans to ask the passage of an act bringing town elections under the terms of the corrupt practices act.

At several points he was interrupted by applause from the majority of some 200 persons at the meeting.

Joseph C. Bruce, former Washington assistant district attorney, declared that he deplored the devotion of more than half an hour to political harangue by Mr. Smith when he had put his resignation into four lines. Dr. Llewellyn Jordan also spoke.

Davis' Farewell Address.

Mayor Davis, in his farewell address, told the council he had reached the age when leisure to devote to certain pleasures and hobbies appeals and that he was not altogether ungrateful to the voters who had retired him to these pleasures two years before he had contemplated. He denied that he had ever countenanced any abrogation of the town's rights nor had he accepted direction from any outside source. He said that his chief regret was that several councilmen with whom he had been associated through years of service, for reasons of their own, had gone over to the opposition.

After having adopted a tentative budget which provided a tax rate of 85 cents, a reduction of 25 cents, the council rescinded its action when it was pointed out by Councilman Peter Remsen that the new mayor would take office at the next meeting. Councilman Irvine H. Ware opposed the action, saying that tax reduction was sweet to him under any mayor. He declared that if the town council didn't reduce taxes as a governing body the "people are going to do it with a saber."

The Smith resignation was referred to a committee for recommendation. The council awarded the contract for improving Hodges lane and Holly avenue to F. I. Ray, of Washington, whose bid of $5,808 was the lowest offered.

Boy, 14, Caught at Still, Is Held for Grand Jury

A 14-year-old boy, arrested when Federal dry agents raided a still near Prince Frederick, Md., was held for the Federal grand jury yesterday after a hearing before U. S. Commissioner J. Frank Parran, in Marlboro. The agents said that a man at the still fled when they approached, but that the boy was stirring mash and was captured.

The youth told Parran that he had stopped on his way to school to watch the operation of the still and that the man had asked him to stir the mash. In holding him in bond of $500, Parran told the boy to tell his story in the Federal court, and he would probably be released on probation.

Prince Georges Convicts "Burnt-Match Burglar"

James Jumper, colored, was yesterday convicted of being Mount Rainier's "burnt match burglar" by a jury in Prince Georges County Circuit Court. Jumper was arrested by Washington police on request of Eugene Plumer, chief of police at Mount Rainier, after several homes had been ransacked by marauders who left behind them little piles of the matches they had lit to illuminate their work.

Jumper was arrested by Montgomery County police in connection with a series of similar burglaries in Bethesda several years ago, but was later released.

GOLFERS TIE IN TOURNEY HERE

Diffenbaugh-Harvey Team's 71 Equaled by Spencer-English.

THE professional amateur tournament staged on the course of the Indian Spring Club yesterday afternoon, eighteen holes, best ball, resulted in a tie between George Diffenbaugh and J. William Harvey, jr., Indian Spring, and Glenn Spencer and William English, Maryland Country Club, each with identical scores of 34—37—71. The third place was won by Frank Cunningham and Richard D. Lunn, Burning Tree, with 34—39—73.

Diffenbaugh led the field with low gross of 74, because Harvey helped him with a stroke on three holes—the seventh, eleventh and twelfth. The eighteenth hole was halved by both in 4s, although Harvey secured his par after a sliced second shot nearly into the clubhouse, after which he played third shot to the green, leaving him a 10-foot putt, which he holed.

Spencer was aided by his partner on four holes, so that his gross would have been 75. The best ball cards of the two leaders were:

HEADROOM IN AN UPPER.

HERE'S good news for railroad travelers—all three of them. The sleeping car people are experimenting with an upper berth in which man can sleep comfortably, although human.

* * * *

An inventor has devised a folding "upper" in which sleeping in underwear, socks and shoes and holding your hat on your chest is not compulsory.

* * * *

It has a "well" in which a passenger can stand upright and indulge in the hitherto unknown luxury of taking his shirt off over his head in a railroad car.

* * * *

When undressed he folds the mattress, eliminates the "well" and finds himself in bed with no wrenched muscles and with the satisfaction that comes through feeling that he can get his clothes on in the morning without a grappling iron, a claw-hammer and a set of directions.

* * * *

He can close his eyes, confident that his shoes are off and that he is not using his coat and vest for a pajama top.

* * * *

No more going to bed in a state of sartorial chaos and getting up in the morning with a feeling that he has spent the night with the mice.

* * * *

What happens to the passenger in the lower berth if he sits up suddenly in the dark while the man upstairs is standing in the "well is not revealed by the inventor. Presumably bumpers are put on the "well." Or on the passenger.

* * * *

AND as indicating that after all these years the railroad companies are beginning to think of the comfort of the passenger, the new upper berth also has dormer windows so a sleeper can get a little air that has been used by no other passenger, and take a peek outdoors during his more nervous moments to see whether he is still passing through a tunnel.

* * * *

The invention does away with the "salmon net" used in all berths as a clothes closet. It has hanger and shelves, according to reports, making it possible for a passenger to place his false teeth where they won't slip away in the darkness and bite the passenger downstairs.

* * * *

It is all very encouraging as tending to solve the problem how to make an overnight trip on a railroad, though you bruise easily.

* * * *

Now, if the roads will do something about ventilating the day coaches and providing a dining car meal that a man of moderate means can afford, everything will be jake.

MERGER OPPONENTS LOSE IN FEE BATTLE

Youngstown-Bethlehem Foe in Legal Fight Plan to Appeal Case.

Cleveland, May 16 (A.P.).—Attorneys who successfully fought the now-canceled merger of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. with the Bethlehem Steel Corporation today lost the first step in their efforts to collect fees and expenses from the Youngstown Co.

John T. Scott, acting as referee for the Mahoning County Court of Appeals, delivered an opinion in which he held the antimerger counsel had no cause for action. Their fees, it was estimated by expert witnesses during a hearing several weeks ago would amount to between $600,000 and $1,000,000.

Harry J. Crawford, of the law firm of Squire, Sanders & Dempsey, who, with Day & Day, of Cleveland, represented the antimerger forces headed by Cyrus S. Eaton, Cleveland financier, announced an appeal would be made.

Referee Criticizes Suit.

Mr. Scott held the suit brought by the Eaton group to halt the proposed billion-dollar merger was "unmeritorious." He disagreed sharply with Common Pleas Judge David Jenkins, of Youngstown, who granted an injunction restraining the merger. Judge Jenkins held there was evidence of fraud, while Mr. Scott said there was no fraud and that the dispute was nothing more than "a controversy over a business matter."

The motion for attorneys' fees was filed when the promerger group moved to drop their appeal from Judge Jenkins' injunction as the merger contract had been canceled in the meantime. The antimerger attorneys contended they had saved Sheet & Tube stockholders "between $50,000,000 and $60,000,000" by halting the consolidation, and their fees and expenses should be borne by the company.

Newton D. Baker, of Baker, Hostetler & Sidlo, chief counsel for the company, argued the deal was advisable and the opposing attorneys had not saved the company money. Baker, Hostetler & Sidlo was given 15 days in which to prepare findings of fact, and then their opponents will be given fifteen days in which to submit objections.

Echo of Battle.

The dispute over the attorneys' fees in the proposed merger was an echo of an epic battle of modern industrial history. The merger, itself dead for some time, would have created a $1,000,000,000 concern.

The struggle began in March, 1930, when Cyrus S. Eaton, Cleveland financier and the largest individual stockholder in Sheet & Tube, heard of the plans for merging with Bethlehem.

Mr. Eaton, contending the plan had been made without his knowledge, promptly began a proxy war in which millions were spent by both sides. Eaton himself was estimated to have spent around $8,000,000. Charges that the proposed exchange of four shares of Bethlehem for three of Sheet & Tube was inequitable were made by Eaton and his associates.

Bethlehem Cancels Contract.

The merger, however, was ratified by the necessary two-thirds majority of the stockholders on April 9, 1930. Mr. Eaton then went to the Mahoning County courts and obtained an injunction restraining the union on the ground that stockholders had not been properly consulted.

Since the struggle began, the picture has changed considerably. Mr. Eaton, who became "the man who licked Wall street," has been the center of a number of suits attacking the conduct of Continental Shares, Inc., through which he was the largest individual stockholder in Sheet & Tube. He has parted from control of Continental.

James A. Campbell, grizzled veteran of the steel industry, resigned as chairman of the board of Sheet & Tube and was replaced by Henry C. Dalton, Cleveland ore and shipping magnate. Dalton's position as an advocate of the merger while a director in both Sheet & Tube and Bethlehem was made much of by the Eaton group. He resigned from Bethlehem's board prior to becoming Sheet & Tube's chairman.

Perpetual Building Honors President

James Berry Is Presented With Clock to Mark 15-Year Service.

Celebrating his 15 years' service as president of the association and 30 years as one of its directors, members of the directorate of the Perpetual Building Association presented President James Berry with a beautiful clock at a meeting of the board yesterday. Mr. Berry, who was a former vice president of the association, succeeded the late Charles F. Benjamin as its president.

Assets of the association, now 51 years old, are in excess of $27,000,000, according to announcement at the last annual meeting of stockholders, this total representing a gain of $2,750,000 during 1931. The association is the third largest financial institution in the city, the twelfth largest association in the United States Building & Loan League, and the seventeenth largest association in the country.

It was organized in 1881 and its first quarters were in the second story of a building on Twelfth street northwest, near F street. In 1914 it moved its offices to a building on its present location at the northwest corner of Eleventh and E streets northwest, where its activities were located until 1926. It then moved to temporary quarters at 1004 E street northwest until completion of its present handsome building.

The association in May, 1931, announced the acquisition of the four-story building immediately west of its location at 1107 E street, giving 2,500 square feet for its future expansion.

MARKET COMMENT

G. M.-P. Murphy & Co.—How closely the further decline in the rate of business activity is related to current political and international uncertainties is a debatable question, but it probably can be said that the former are at least as directly concerned in the present slumps in security prices as the latter. * * * The car loadings figure to be reported Wednesday is estimated to be down 20,000 cars, a drastic decline, but one that has been expected since individual roads began reporting their loadings for the week, several days ago. A peculiar phase of the present movements in business indices is that car loadings, which should be rising slightly at this time, are declining sharply, while steel and automobile production are doing better than seasonal expectations. * * * We see no reason to suggest changing speculative policy. After all the percentage declines of the past several weeks have taken into account a large amount of adversity. The news factors which have accompanied or caused previous rallies of this bear market have been unexpected and sudden. They have come at times of complete discouragement like the present rather than when rally expectations were general as they were last week.

Westheimer & Co.—Moderately improved sentiment was noted in market, but without any material change in the character of news to account for it. General situation helped by easing up of the pressure against the railroad group. Decision in the Oklahoma oil conservation case may be helpful.

Alexander Hamilton Institute—Local taxes are vastly more burdensome than those of the Federal Government. Today 22 per cent of the average family income goes to pay Government expenses, and well over two-thirds of this amount for State and local government.

Du Pont Cuts Dividend; Wages Also Reduced

New York, May 16 (A.P.).—Directors of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. today reduced the quarterly dividend on the common stock to 75 cents from $1, thus placing the shares on a $3 annual basis, against the $4 rate paid since March, 1929.

The reduction reflected in part the smaller income received by the company from its holdings of General Motors stock, amounting to about 9,900,000 shares. General Motors recently cut its annual dividend rate to $1 from $2.

Grain Visible Supply.

The visible supply of American grain shows the following changes, in bushels: Wheat decreased 4,176,000; corn decreased 201,000; oats decreased 769,000; rye decreased 118,000; barley decreased 69,000.

U. S. HOLDS BALANCE OF TRADE FOR APRIL

(Associated Press.)

The United States had a favorable foreign trade balance of $9,000,000 during April. The Department of Commerce in a preliminary announcement yesterday said exports for April were approximately $136,000,000 and imports $127,000,000. In April, 1931, exports were $215,077,000 and imports $185,708,000.

Exports of gold during April totaled $49,509,000 compared with $27,000 in April, 1931. Imports were $19,033,000 against $49,543,000.

Silver exports during April were $1,596,000 against $5,249,000 in April, 1931, and imports were $1,612,000 against $2,439,000.

Cotton exports continued to hold up, supplying a substantial portion of the total. During April $20,518,000 worth of cotton was exported. This was $15,830,000 less than in March but it was explained that the cotton shipping season is nearing an end, which would account for the apparent falling off.

B. & O. $25,500,000 Loan Is Authorized

Money Will Be Used to Pay Notes; Banks Carry Other Obligations.

(Associated Press.)

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday authorized the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. to borrow $25,500,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for three years. The company will receive $8,000,000 on May 25 and $17,500,000 on August 10.

The money is to be used to pay $8,000,000 worth of short-term notes due May 25 and one-half of the principal amount (of $35,000,000 of unsecured 4 per cent short-term notes due August 10.

The B. & O. on March 21 applied to the commission for authorization to borrow $55,000,000 from the corporation, saying it was needed to meet obligations due during 1932. Following its policy of requesting banks to carry half of the loans which may come due, the commission in cooperation with the corporation secured the consent of banks and the railroad company to carry a portion of the funds by private financing.

Stocks Rally With Wheat; Bonds Again Touch Bottom

Recovery Exceeds Early Losses by Slight Margin on Grain News and Rumors of Constructive Moves in Capital; Curb Rises With Big Board.

By JOHN L. COOLEY.

New York, May 16 (A.P.).—Helped by a firm wheat market and circulation of a few vague rumors, stocks today accomplished a last hour rally that converted early losses of 1 to 4 points into net gains of somewhat smaller proportions.

Soggy in the morning when most leaders made new lows, the market steadied around noon after Dupont's dividend reduction had proved smaller than generally expected. Prices then drifted quietly until mid-afternoon when further nebulous rumors that constructive developments were afoot in Washington stimulated short covering. Reports of new restrictions on short selling were also heard, but promptly denied. Offerings were rather scarce on the advance and declines disappeared quickly in fairly active late trading. Transactions totaled 1,293,100 shares, the largest volume in more than a week.

Union Pacific, which had been down 4 points, rallied to get up a point, net, but closed with a small loss. Final prices generally were a little under the top of the rally. Santa Fe, off 2½ at the lowest, gained nearly a point net; so did New York Central and Southern Pacific. Chesapeake & Ohio, encouraged by its April net operating income, finished one to the good.

Industrials Close Higher.

American Telephone exchanged a 1¾ point loss for a net gain of similar extent and traded actively on the recovery. Peoples Gas, American Can, Allied Chemical, Sears Roebuck, National Biscuit, Eastman, Coca Cola, Union Carbide, Consolidated Gas and Westinghouse were up 1 to 2.

Homestake Mining jumped 7. Preferred stocks reflected an extremely thin market which was especially noticeable in the Santa Fe issue. Against the previous close of 55, this stock met a bid price of 41 against 48 asked, and a sale was finally negotiated at the latter figure. Senior equities of Union Pacific, American Tobacco, International Harvester and Bethlehem Steel lost 2 to 3.

The only visible effect of disturbances at Tokyo was in Japanese bonds and the yen. Wall street's present preoccupation with domestic affairs has doubtless dulled its interest in foreign happenings, although the international background of some of our own difficulties has not been lost sight of in banking circles.

Stagnation Is Illustrated.

America's foreign trade figures for April illustrated strikingly the extreme stagnation that has overtaken our commerce with other nations. Exports, with the exception of August, 1914, were the smallest since July, 1911, and at $136,000,000 were not much above the total for that month. The favorable balance for the first third of this year is $71,409,000.

The Du Pont dividend was reduced to a $3 annual basis from $4 paid since March, 1929. A cut had been widely taken as a matter of course in view of the smaller income accruing to the corporation from its General Motors investment, but many forecasters had been predicting a revision to $2.50.

Washington dispatches during market hours spoke hopefully of the probable attitude of the House toward the Senate tax bill on which debate was continued. Brokerage houses still count on budget balancing as a primary factor in confidence building, although they point out that a new element appears to have been injected into the situation in the form of Federal relief proposals.

Money markets were dull. Time accommodations brought 1½ per cent for all maturities; there has as yet been no indications that the stock exchange call loan rate intended to drop from its 2½ per cent peg.

Tokyo News Shakes Bonds.

Although the bond market explored new low depths for the year today, there was a noticeable drying up of offerings and at times trading was almost at a standstill.

Sales totaled but $7,848,000, par value, the smallest volume in several weeks, while the average for 60 corporate securities lost eight-tenths of a point.

The railroads again bore the brunt of liquidation in the domestic section and the foreign department was unsettled by a sharp decline in Japanese bonds.

Weakness of the carriers could not be attributed to any particular news developments. The fall of Japanese loans, however, was the result of the assassination of Premier Inuaki and fear of further political disturbances in the island empire. Most of the Nipponese issues showed losses of 1 to 4 points at one period, but a mild late rally cut the heaviest declines moderately.

Losses of from 1 to 4 or more points were recorded by some liens of Atchison, Baltimore & Ohio, Canadian Northern, Canadian Pacific, Burlington, St. Paul, Rock Island, Delaware & Hudson, Erie, Great Northern, Illinois Central, Missouri-Kansas-Texas, New York Central, New Haven, Pennsylvania, Reading, Southern Pacific and Union Pacific.

Both the industrials and utilities suffered, but much less than the railways. American Telephones, International Telephones and Postal Telegraphs rallied after early softness. Loans of Columbia Gas, Laclede Gas, Loews, Paramount Broadway, Paramount-Famous-Lasky, North American Edison and Schulco declined. Some of the oils improved moderately.

French government bonds recovered substantially, as did those of Queensland. Strength was shown by loans of Britain, Costa Rica, Colombia and Sweden. The Germans eased.

The United States Government was mixed, with minor losses generally outnumbering gains.

Curb Gains Strong.

The Curb Market finally jolted out of its downward groove in the late trading today and the more active issues closed with moderate gains. Trading quickened substantially, the day's turnover aggregating 160,000 shares, 40,000 more than last Friday's, and the largest day's business in a month. The late upturn was in sympathy with the big board, which appeared to have become oversold.

Some of the oils turned strong, notably Indiana and Gulf, each closing with gains of about a point. Union Oil Associates, however, was sold in moderate volume, and closed fractionally lower. Humble was steady in a small turnover.

Columbia Gas & Electric preferred dropped to a new low at 59, off 8½ points, in a few sales. The company reported earnings of 42 cents a common share, after preferred dividends, for the first quarter of 1932. Electric Power Associates, which had an upturn last week, virtually lost its gain with a decline of about a point.

A number of the industrials again broke into new low ground in thin trading. General Aviation, however, closed up ¼, despite publication of its 1931 report showing a deficit of $2,232,785.

Ford of Canada "A" closed up ½. Mead Johnson broke 4 points and Singer Manufacturing 2 to new lows in a few sales.

A. O. Smith touched 17¼, and closed at 20⅜, off 5½, net.

JAPANESE BONDS HIT IN STREET PRESSURE

Issues Drop 1 to 4 Points Despite Feeling Tokyo Is Not Nearing Default.

By VICTOR EUBANK.

New York, May 16 (A.P.).—While Wall street financial leaders were somewhat concerned over the political developments in Japan, the general feeling was that the situation, although extremely serious, was not quite as bad as it appeared.

Japanese affairs are of particular interest to investment bankers because the empire has outstanding some $400,000,000 in Government and corporate bonds. Most of these listed issues were under considerable pressure today on the New York Stock Exchange, declining from 1 to 4 or more points.

At the same time, close observers of Oriental affairs point out the Japanese have never yet defaulted in their interest charges and they have no near-maturities that might be embarrassing.

Listed Japanese Bonds.

The principal Nipponese bonds listed here are the Government 6½s of 1954 and 5½s of 1965; Oriental development 6s, of 1953 and 5½ of 1958; Toho Electric Power 7s, of 1958 and 6s of June 15, 1932; Taiwan Electric 5½s of 1971; Tokyo City 5½s of 1961 and 5s of 1952; Tokyo Electric Light 6s of 1953; Sh Nyetau Electric Power 6½s of 1952 and Yokohama City 6s of 1961.

Both of the Oriental development issues are guaranteed by the government and, like the government's bonds, have been relatively steady recently although around 20 or more points under their high figures for the year. The loans of Nippon began their decline with the Manchurian military adventure and prices continued to slide further when the Japanese entered Shanghai.

The comparatively low price of the Government's bonds is said to have resulted in considerable quiet, but steady buying from Japanese sources during the past month or so.

Most of the Japanese loans dropped from $10 to $40 per $1,000 par valuation today, but some of them rallied moderately near the close of the market. The government 5½s and 6½s ended with net losses of $20 to $32.50, respectively, while the Oriental development issues of 5½s and 6s, both government granted, showed net declines of $16.25 and $11.25. Great Consolidated Electric Power 7s lost $45.50, while Tokyo and Yokohama municipal and corporate issues were off from $12.50 to $40.

The Japanese yen, which has been sagging for some time, reached a new low for the year at 31 cents for cables, a net loss of 1 cent on the day. The yen started its decline several months ago when Japan suspended the gold standard.

Recent Outlook Darker.

At the same time New York bankers, who have frequently visited Japan and who are always in touch with existing conditions there, declare that the empire's economic picture has been an exceptionally darz one in the past two years. Silk, the country's principal export, has fallen to record low prices and the balance of trade has been steadily flowing into the adverse column.

A Radical-Fascist movement, it is said, has been growing in Japan during the last four or five years. The younger Japanese, among whom there is great unemployment at present, have been especially active in denouncing the existing political parties and, in addition to the assassinations of prominent government figures, numerous disorders have occurred from time to time in various parts of the empire.

The principal cause of discontent, it is pointed out, has been the feeling that the Government has done little to advance the cause of Japan either in Manchuria or China proper. The younger element, jobless and with little hope for an industrial future, is seen as the principal influence in a move to overthrow the older political leaders who, they declare, are "asleep."

Financiers feel that, although a new party or parties may come into existence with modern Japanese youth largely in control, there is little fear that the empire will not meet its debts or will attempt to cast off the influences of western civilization which have been making great strides in Nippon during the last century.

Wall Street Briefs

New York, May 16 (A.P.).—During April the ratio of in-and-out daily short sales to the total volume of trading on the New York Stock Exchange was 6.6 per cent, compared with 5.68 per cent in March and 6.3 per cent in February.

Total sales of sheet steel for April, as reported by the National Association of Flat Rolled Steel Manufacturers, were 103,011 tons, representing 27 per cent of the industry's capacity. Production was 101,599 tons and shipments 104,637 tons. Unfilled tonnage was 99,510 tons and unsold stock 71,318 tons.

The New York Stock Exchange has notified its members that sales of units of stocks to customers, such as, say, a unit of 25 shares including 5 shares each of 5 leading issues, must be made on a straight odd-lot commission basis, or must come under the regulations dealing with fixed trusts, which requires that a member may be associated only with trusts approved by the committee on the stock list. The ruling was understood to have been made in response to request of some members to be permitted to sell units on a commission basis similar to that offered by some nonmember security distributors.

The decrease in forest fires in April as compared with March was one of the smallest for any month in the current depression, according to the Fairchild retail price index as of May 1. The index at that date, 77.5, shows a decrease of 1.1 per cent under April 1. Prices on May 1 were 17.4 per cent below May 1, 1931.

Keith-Orpheum Corporation will pay the interest on its 10-year 6 per cent debentures on June 1 by calling for payment of an equivalent amount on the purchase price of the part-paid certificates for the debentures and common stock, due under the terms of their issuance.

United Cigar Stores Co., Schulte Retail Stores Corporation, and the Liggett chain of drug stores today announced an advance on the price of popular brands of cigarettes to 14 cents a package and to two packages for 27 cents, from the prevailing price of 13 cents and two packages for 25 cents. The advance is effective tomorrow.

OKLAHOMA OIL CURB SUSTAINED BY COURT

Justice Butler, in Opinion, Holds Against Receiver Ruled for Offenders.

(Associated Press.)

The Oklahoma oil curtailment act was sustained as valid yesterday by the Supreme Court in a case brought by the Champlin Refining Co., of Enid, Okla.

The opinion, delivered by Justice Butler, declared the rules, regulations and pool rationing orders of the Oklahoma Corporation Commission, issued under the curtailment act, were valid.

The court, however, set aside as invalid section 9 of the act, which would enable the State to proceed against violators of the conservation laws to have their oil properties placed in the hands of receivers.

The court refused to rule on the validity of section 8, saying this was not properly before it.

Justice Butler emphasized that the State commission limited production of oil to the reasonably marketable demands and apportioned ratably among those engaged in the production from a common source.

Operation Under Plan.

Under this plan, the Champlin Co. was permitted to produce only 6 per cent of its possible output.

The Oklahoma conservation laws were called spectacularly to the Nation's attention last year, when Gov. Murray called out troops and shut down wells under their provisions.

Justice Butler said that the commission, which issued the order for the curtailment of production, permitted full marketable production of each pool and had not attempted to fix prices.

The Champlin company claimed the right to take all the production from its wells without restriction but the court held this would result in physical waste.

The court said the decision would not prevent producers of oil from applying to the court for injunctive relief should orders of the commission be unwarranted by conditions in the futfre.

The opinion said the production of oil was a mining operation and was not in itself interstate commerce. For that reason, the decision added, the curtailment orders did not constitute a burden on interstate commerce.

Commenting on the oil company's claim that it had a right to take all the natural flow of oil and gas from its wells, so long as it did so without physical waste, and devote the production to commercial uses, Justice Butler said that if all the flow were taken "there would inevitably result great physical waste even if its entire production should be devoted to useful purposes."

Improvident Use of Gas.

GRAIN VALUES CLIMB ON CROP DECREASES

Decline in Visible Supplies Also Is Factor; Corn and Oats Advance.

Chicago, May 16 (A.P.).—Spurred by bullish crop reports and by a big decrease of the United States visible wheat supply, grain values made a lively advance late today.

One of the country's foremost unofficial authorities indicated Kansas would raise below 70,000,000 bushels of wheat this season unless weather conditions soon changed completely. The Kansas yield suggested would be 18,000,000 bushels less than the Government's May forecast and not even a third of the amount harvested in 1931.

Wheat closed nervous, 1 to 1¾ cents above Saturday's finish; corn ¼ to ¾ cent up, oats at ¼ to ⅜ cent advance, and provisions unchanged to 5 cents off.

New deterioration and further abandonment of domestic winter wheat in the Southwest was reported, especially in important sections that included parts of central and southern Kansas, and extended southward into the Texas Panhandle. Other advices about crop prospects Southwest implied that the Kansas 1932 wheat harvest would approximate but 50,000,000 bushels, and that owing to dust storms the Texas Panhandle would do well to produce 10,000,000 bushels instead of recent forecasts of 28,000,000. From a different source also was a report that in a strip 700 miles long and 200 miles wide, between South Dakota and Amarillo, Tex., the best that could be expected for wheat would be a 40 per cent crop.

Helping to stimulate wheat-price upturns were late rallies in the stock market. Earlier, bearish action of securities operated as a drag on grain values, but was more or less offset by notice taken that United States prices both for wheat and corn were below Argentine quotations. Bulls asserted that better than a competitive basis with the Southern Hemisphere betokened the bottom had been reached. Today's decrease of 4,183,000 bushels in the United States wheat visible supply brought the total down to 170,719,000 bushels, against 191,688,000 a year ago.

Corn and oats took their cue from wheat. Country offerings of corn were small, and the forecast was for frost tonight in northern Missouri.

'JobAuction' Over Radio Brings Aid for 53 Men

Odd jobs for 53 men were obtained through a "job auction" over Station WRC last night under the auspices of the American Legion. Herluf Provensen, NBC announcer, read to the radio audience a list of unemployed men, and asked radio fans to telephone in with offers of jobs. Francis P. Miller, of the welfare department of the American Legion, received the telephone calls.

Within three minutes after Mr. Provensen had described several men out of jobs, ten calls were received. The calls continued until after the program was over. The "job auction" will be repeated over Station WRC next Wednesday night at 6:15 o'clock.

D. A. R. PLANT TREES AS MEMORIAL TO 8 VIRGINIA PRESIDENTS

DR. L.G.TYLER SPEAKER AT PATRIOTIC SERVICE

Descendants of Former Chief Executives Participate in Ceremonies.

Mount Vernon Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, yesterday afternoon dedicated eight memorial trees, placed in the first two triangular islands south of Alexandria, on the Mount Vernon Memorial boulevard, in honor of the eight Presidents of the United States who were born in Virginia. A bronze tablet was unveiled bearing this inscription:

"These trees were planted in commemoration of the eight Presidents of the United States who were sons of Virginia, George Washington, 1789-1797; Thomas Jefferson, 1801-1809; James Madison, 1809-1817; James Monroe, 1817-1825; William Henry Harrison, 1841; John Tyler, 1841-1845; Zachary Taylor, 1849-1850; Woodrow Wilson, 1913-1921. Mount Vernon Chapter, N. S. D. A. R., Alexandria, Va., 1932."

Mrs. Wilson Present.

The curtain of blue and white silk that covered the inscription was drawn by Mrs. Eleanor Selden Washington Howard, representing the First President, and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, widow of the latest Virginia-born President.

The exercises were opened by Mrs. Charles Alexander Swann Sinclair, regent of Mount Vernon Chapter, who called upon the Rev. Dr. William Jackson Morton, rector of historic Christ Episcopal Church, Alexandria, for the invocation. The salute to the flag was led by Mrs. Sinclair, after which "The Star-Spangled Banner was played by the Thirteenth Engineer Band, Fort Humphreys.

Mrs. Sinclair said this year marks the thirty-ninth anniversary of the organization of the chapter. She introduced Dr. Lyons Gardner Tyler, of Charles City County, Va., the son of President John Tyler, who was the orator of the day.

Dr. Tyler paid tribute to each of the Virginia-born Presidents, recalling some incident in the term of each that particularly endeared them to the people.

Guests at Country Club.

At the close of the dedication service, the gathering went to the Belle Haven Country Club where Mrs. Howard and Col. Harrison H. Dodge, superintendent of Mount Vernon, cut the huge birthday cake of the chapter. They are the only survivors of those who were present at Mount Vernon May 15, 1893, when the chapter was organized. The members of Mount Vernon Chapter entertained at a tea, assisted by a number of the descendants of the charter members.

Among the descendants of the Presidents of the United States who were present yesterday at the exercises were Dr. and Mrs. Lyons Gardner Tyler, Mrs. Marthena Harrison Williams, granddaughter of President Harrison; Mrs. Russell Harrison, of Chevy Chase, Md.; Mrs. Rose Gouvenor Hoes and Mr. Laurence Hoes, representing the family of President Monroe; Mrs. Lawrence Washington, of Washington; Dr. and Mrs. James Southall Wilson, of the University of Virginia; Mr. and Mrs. James Madison Macon, of Richmond, and Mrs. Henry Starr Wattles, of Alexandria, representing the family of President Madison; Mrs. Eleanor Selden Washington Howard, a collateral descendant of President Washington, and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson.

Prior to the ceremonies, Mount Vernon Chapter elected the following officers: Mrs. Charles Alexander Swann Sinclair, regent; Mrs. Malcolm Matheson, vice regent; Mrs. Robert Miller Reese, treasurer; Mrs. Charles Calvert Smoot 3d, recording secretary; Mrs. John Taylor Stephenson, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Curtis B. Backus, registrar, and Miss Grace Powell, historian. Mrs. Howard is the life chaplain of the chapter.

INVESTOR IN RHEEM FIRM KILLS HIMSELF

Guard at Freer Art Gallery Was Also Despondent Over Poor Health.

Brooding over the loss of his life's savings and despondent because of rapidly failing health, Michael A. Coleman, 63 years old, last night shot himself through the head while on duty in the Freer Art Gallery, Twelfth and B streets southwest, where he is employed as a guard.

Fellow employes at the gallery—a part of the Smithsonian Institution—found Mr. Coleman lying unconscious near the north entrance, where, for more than eight years he had been stationed on night duty. J. W. Terett, of 945 E street southwest, also a guard, said he heard a shot about 10:30 o'clock, but paid no attention to it. It was not until almost a half hour later, while making his rounds, that Terett found Mr. Coleman lying on the floor.

Coleman was taken to Emergency Hospital, where he died shortly after 1 o'clock this morning.

According to friends with whom the aged man had worked for many years, he had been brooding over the loss of his life's savings, which some time ago he invested in the now defunct Swartzell, Rheem & Hensey Co. That, together with failing health, is believed to have prompted him to end his life.

Rampaging Truck Costs Owner $70

Six Traffic Charges Are Lodged After Long and Wild Chase.

A truck of somewhat ancient vintage but surprising agility yesterday got Walter M. Gant, colored, into great trouble at Police Court when he was fined $70 on six traffic charges after eight others had been cast aside in favor of more serious violations.

He was charged with no permit, speeding, failing to heed two stop signs, no headlights and failing to give a hand signal on a turn.

Gant was chased by Policemen Watson Salkeld and B. F. Spittle through most of southeast Washington. When he was finally corralled he was only two blocks from the place where the chase started.

Legion Fiesta Draws Large Attendance

A large attendance so far this week was announced by the executive committee of the District of Columbia Department of the American Legion at the Bicentennial fiesta being held at Fourteenth and R streets southeast under their auspices.

First Day Out By Policeman Is Banner One

For almost two months and a half Private J. E. Bennett, of the Traffic Bureau, has been cooped up inside as a station clerk, taking routine reports and making entries on the arrest book. He gained his freedom yesterday and was put back on a motorcycle.

Within two hours of the time he reported for street duty after his long lay-off, he had taken part in two motorcycle-automobile chases, had confiscated one automobile and a quantity of liquor, and had arrested three persons in connection with the alleged theft of an automobile.

Bennett ran into his first bit of excitement just after he came on duty at 4 p. m. He picked up a car, which appeared to him to be suspicious, at First and M streets northwest. He chased it to Delaware avenue and Canal street southwest, where three men jumped out and ran. He found a quantity of liquor in the car.

Returning from this chase, he encountered another car at Seventh and Water streets southwest, which also appeared suspicious. He ran this one to earth four blocks away. He arrested three colored men on investigation charges. The car was allegedly stolen.

Grand Jury Closes Bus-Crash Inquiry

Report on Fatal Accident of April 17 Is Agreed Upon by Body.

Under the guidance of Assistant United States Attorney Wilbert McInerney, the District grand jury yesterday took up and concluded consideration of the establishment of criminal liability for the fatal crash between two buses at Seventeenth street and Rhode Island avenue northwest, April 17.

Two men were killed, and eleven other passengers were hurt, some of them seriously, when a Capital Traction de luxe bus and a Washington Railway & Electric Co. bus collided violently.

Center Market Theft Reported.

SUICIDE IS VERDICT IN YOUNGER'S DEATH

Wife Looked On Helplessly as Architect Fired Shot Through His Heart.

A certificate of suicide was issued by the coroner in the death of Joseph Younger, prominent 37-year-old Washington architect, who shot himself through the heart early yesterday in his apartment in the Tilden Gardens.

According to police, two shots were fired into the wall of the apartment by Mr. Younger to test his .45-caliber automatic, before he fired the fatal shot into his body.

His wife, Mrs. Ethel Younger, had just retired and watched helplessly as he collapsed under a drawing table on which he had placed a quotation from the Bible which said, "Because to every purpose there is time and judgment, therefore the misery of man is great."

A series of financial reverses are believed by friends to be the reason for the act. Mr. Younger's most outstanding achievement was the designing of the Kennedy-Warren Apartments that opened recently. He also designed the Wardman Park Saddle Club, the Sixth Presbyterian Church, Sixteenth and Kennedy streets; Rizik's F street store and the Blackstone Hotel, on Seventeenth street.

He is survived by his widow, a son, Bruce, 7 years old, who was in the apartment in bed at the time of the suicide; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Younger; a sister, Mrs. Raymond Davis, all of this city, and a brother living in Pittsburgh, Pa.

Court Reaffirms Murder Conviction

Charles Morris Loses Appeal in Shooting Woman; Execution June 22.

The conviction of Charles Morris, colored, for the murder of Maggie Landon, colored, in July, 1930, was affirmed by the Court of Appeals yesterday. Morris, it was shown, had been drinking, and coaxed the woman, who is called his paramour by the Appellate Court, to a bridge over the Chesapeak & Ohio Canal, where he shot her twice.

Eyewitnesses captured Morris and turned him over to police. His attorneys, Cedric Johnson, George S. Naphen and William J. Crane, contended that oral statements made by Morris soon after his arrest were not proper evidence. They also raised the point that Justice Jesse C. Adkins failed to charge the jury as to manslaughter, the contention being that Morris and the woman had been fighting.

Morris' execution, set for this week, has been postponed until June 22.

GEORGETOWN GROUP ATTACKS GLASSFORD CRIME PREVENTION

Two Women Appointed by Citizens to Investigate New Division.

MISS TAGGART CALLS IT WASTE OF CITY'S MONEY

Association Seeks Return of Old Rotary Turn for Automobiles.

An investigation of the crime prevention division, established yesterday by Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford, was ordered last night by the Progressive Citizens Association of Georgetown, who refused to indorse the idea and criticized the plan as "just another way to waste the taxpayers' money."

Miss Etta Taggart, a lawyer, and Mrs. Elizabeth Sullivan, both members of the law and legislation committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations, were appointed to conduct the investigation. Miss Taggart severely criticized the idea as a "useless, impractical plan, which will cost the taxpayers of the District $100,000 a year in salaries alone."

"The idea of crime prevention is good," said Miss Taggart, "but when the Detective Bureau was organized it was founded specifically to "detect and prevent" crime. What Gen. Glassford has created is, in effect, another detective bureau, with duplication of effort on every hand, just adding to wastage of the people's money."

Personnel Held Too Large.

"He is removing from the streets policemen who should properly be on patrol and adding to crime prevention by their very presence on the streets. My understanding is that Brig. Gen. Glassford created this bureau over the objections of leading officers in the department, who have each had practical experience in dealing with criminals for periods of 20 years or more.

"The idea of contacting railroad stations, hotels and any other place where criminals may congregate is good, but I have also learned from other cities that this work is very efficiently done by four or five experienced men, while Gen. Glassford's plan would throw 30 to 35 men into this work, including an inspector, a captain and a lieutenant.

Miss Taggart said that in the course of her investigation of the plain, she would discuss the subject with Gen. Glassford, as well as with the inspectors in the department who opposed the idea, getting their viewpoint as well. Inspector O. T. Davis, who said, "Yes," when Gen. Glassford suggested the plain to him, will also be interviewed, said Miss Taggart.

Wants Rotary Turn Returned.

The group met in the Eaton School. Several resolutions were adopted, one of which opposed the left turn for automobiles as now in vogue and urged a return to the cast-off rotary turn.

In other actions the group urged a $9,500,000 lump sum appropriaton for the District from Congress and asked also for a $600,000 appropriation for unemployment relief, the money to be reallocated from the sum already authorized for the proposed municipal center.

A fourth resolution asked that the mother's pension bill be reinserted in the Senate District appropriation bill as originally recommended by the District Commissioners.

Lieut. Rhoda Milliken, head of the Woman's Bureau of the Police Department, was admitted to membership.

Fire Under Takoma Car Blocks Traffiic for Hour

Northbound street car traffic on the Fourteenth street line was held up more than an hour last night when the plow on a Takoma Park car burst into flames. The car had stopped at the loading platform at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, when the blaze started.

G. G. Anderson, of Vienna, Va., motorman, seeing the flames and the smoke coming up from the bottom of the car, closed the doors so that the passengers would not be injured. The flame continued to course up and down the track when the current was applied. After an hour of waiting, the car was finally moved without mishap.

Prisoner Who Escaped From Train Arrested

A prisoner who escaped from a moving train May 3 while being taken to Occoquan Workhouse was arrested yesterday by Detective Sergts. James C. Collins and Michael J. Dowd.

The prisoner, Charles A. Tosh, 31 years old, was arrested in the 1900 block of H street northwest in company with a man who gave his name as Wallace O. Hickox. The break for freedom was made by Tosh as he was being transferred from Occoquan to Montgomery County, where he was wanted on traffic charges. He had just been released from the workhouse, after serving a term for passing bad checks.

VAN ORSDEL WARNS OF FEDERAL POWER

Appellate Justice Addresses Sons of Revolution at Annual Meeting.

Unless the tendency towards centralization of governmental power is checked, the system of American representative Government will end, Justice Josiah A. Van Orsdel, president general of the National Society, Sons of the American Revolution, told the organization yesterday at its annual meeting in the Mayflower Hotel.

This greatest experiment in representative Government, the Court of Appeals justice said, can not long survive if the States continue to surrender their most "sacred sovereign prerogatives to the minority-ruled, commission-governed, bloc-controlled, bureaucratic, centralized Government power here in Washington."

"Constitutional, representative democracy is on trial the world over," he said. "Socialistic communism is manifesting itself at every hand. Our whole vast political system has become impregnated with the most vicious socialistic tendencies.

Disintegration Is Cited.

"It is most clearly manifested in the disintegration of our dual system of State and national Government, upon which our Government was founded and upon which alone it can endure."

He said the tendency toward centralization can be checked only by an awakened citizenship, which will place in power men "inspired by a patriotic devotion to the welfare of their country, and who will cast out the political sycophants who keep their ears to the ground ready to sacrifice their country's honor and security in response to any wave of popular clamor, however, feeble, that seems to offer political support."

Justice Van Orsdel was guest of honor last night at a reception at the national headquarters, which was attended by all the delegates. The United States Marine Orchestra provided the music.

Society to Honor Liberator.

This afternoon the society will give recognition to the great liberator of South America, Gen. San de Martin, with ceremonies at the statue to the patriot in Judiciary Square. Dr. Felipe A. Espil, Ambassador of Argentina, will be present with his staff. Justice Van Orsdel will speak. Other patriotic societies will participate in the services.

The congress opened yesterday with a message from President Hoover expressing his regrets that he was unable to attend. Later the delegates went to the White House and were photographed with the President. They then returned to the Mayflower and the rest of the day was taken up with reports of national officers and committees.

The annual banquet of the society will be held tonight with Justice Van Orsdel presiding. Speakers will be Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, and Past President General Wallace McCamant.

Girl Loses Leg in Fall Beneath Freight Train

A 5-year-old girl who hitched a ride on a freight car yesterday in the yards at New Jersey avenue and I street southeast was near death in Providence Hospital last night. She slipped beneath the wheels and one of her legs was crushed. It was amputated above the knee.

Phyllis Thornton, colored, of 105 H street southeast, wandered into the yards yesterday afternoon about 4:30 o'clock and was playing around one of the box cars. She climbed on the car and played there for a while, when a switch engine came along to take it away. The girl decided to ride along, but her foot slipped as the train moved away and she tumbled beneath the wheels.

UNION HEAD OPPOSES PRINTERS' PAY CUTS

Mills Files Analysis of House Economy Measure With Senate Committee.

Vehemently protesting provisions of the House economy bill that would reduce the pay of Government printers more than $470 a year, Clyde M. Mills, president of Columbia Typographical Union, yesterday filed his analysis of the measure with the Senate economy committee.

While the committee marked time, pending recovery of Senator Kenneth McKellar, stricken ill Saturday, protests continued to flow into every senator's office, charging inequities in House economy provisions affecting personnel.

Must Work at Night.

"Practically all work performed at night is for the Congressional Record, which must be on the desks early in the morning, new bills, records of hearings, and other reports required by the same Congress which seeks to take away such a large amount of the salary of those who perform the work," read the statement.

"It is inconceivable that Congress, which creates the necessity for night work, should consider taking away the additional pay granted a worker for the convenience of Congress, for the breaking up of his home life, his social contacts and the liability against his health."

Under the enforced Federal furlough plan, being considered by the Senate committee as a substitute for the pay cut voted by the House, Mr. Mills estimated Government printers would lose nearly $1,000 a year.

Would Cut Into Earnings.

The salary slash approved by the House would take away $37.02 from the printer rated at $1.10 an hour. If he worked at night the loss of extra pay would add $411.84 to his reduction, Mr. Mills said.

Under the President's proposed plan, the five-day week at ten-elevenths pay would cut $256.36, loss of night differential would add $430.56, and loss of annual leave would add $276, the union head pointed out. Employes of the Government Printing Office receive no sick leave.

Planes Aid in Drive To Boost Business

Ludington Craft Drop Balloons Carrying Tags Valued at $100.

Planes from the Ludington Air Lines dropped 900 ballons over Washington yesterday. Tags worth $100 were dropped with the ballons.

This "bombing" of the city is the contribution of the Washington Paint Club to assist in home betterment and home maintenance. It will be repeated every day of the week until 5,000 ballons and tags worth $500 have been dropped.

The program is under the direction of the property improvement and business cooperation committee, which also yesterday called a meeting of the retail lumber dealers of the District to enlist their cooperation in organized stimulation of business.

Purse and $42 Reported Stolen.

A pocketbook containing $42 was stolen from a dresser drawer in the bedroom of Milton Ackerman, of 904 K street northeast, yesterday afternoon, according to police.

FIGHT BEGINS TODAY FOR $4,000,000 CUT FROM CITY'S BUDGET

FEDERAL CONTRIBUTION IS PRINCIPAL PROBLEM

Capper Will Urge Inclusion of $600,000 Sought for Jobless Relief.

The fight to restore more than $4,000,000 lopped by the House from District appropriations will get under way at 10 o'clock this morning, when the Senate District appropriations subcommittee starts hearings on the District supply bill.

Testimony will be opened by the District Commissioners and Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, who will outline 1933 needs and the present depleted state of the District's surplus.

Meeting Hurriedly Called.

Senator Hiram Bingham (Republican), Connecticut, chairman of the subcommittee, made a last-minute decision to go ahead today, after illness of Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, forced postponement of economy committee sessions.

As ex-officio member of the subcommittee, Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), Kansas, chairman of the Senate District committee, will sit in on the meetings.

He is particularly anxious the Senate provide in the District bill a $600,000 appropriation recommended by President Hoover for local unemployment relief, but discarded by the House.

U. S. Aid Vital Issue.

One of the pivotal issues before the subcommittee is the amount of Federal contribution Congress should make toward local expenses. Last year $9,500,000 was agreed to in conference. This year the House voted $6,500,000, specifying that the difference be made up by $4,000,000 in taxes proposed under the Mapes program.

The Mapes bills, which passed the House, have not come to a Senate vote, but District budget estimates were so cut by the House that the new tax revenues would not be necessary. Senator Bingham and his committee are expected to hold out for a lump sum at least as large as that voted last year.

West End Citizens Adjourn Meetings.

The last meeting until September was held last night by the West End Citizens Association at Stockton Hall, George Washington University. A resolution was adopted to hold their meetings, beginning in September, in the Grant School, at 2122 G street northwest.

Lincoln Park Citizens Pay Silent Tribute to Slain Baby

A minute of silent reverence in sympathy for the parents of the Lindbergh baby was observed last night by members of the Lincoln Park Citizens Association at the meeting in the Bryan School. The association voiced approval of the President in spurring on the hunt for the criminals.

A resolution was adopted by the members to request the assistant superintendent of schools, who is in charge of construction, to allocate from funds already in hand an amount sufficient to complete the playgrounds of the Elliott Junior High School.

A report of joint meetings of representatives of the Trinidad, Northeast, Stanton Park and Lincoln Park Citizens Associations on the progress of the neighborhood Fourth of July celebration plans was received. The suggested new steam boiler inspection provision was approved, and the association voted for the abolishment of a cabstand at Twelfth and B streets northeast, stating that it was illegally established.

The Holy Comforter Band, led by the Rev. Father Joseph Denges, presented a musical program. Joseph L. Gammell, president, presided. The association adjourned over the summer months.

Flames Kill Woman, 91, And Burn Her Rescuer

A 91-year-old woman died in a hospital yesterday afternoon a few hours after she had been removed from her flaming room. A neighbor who battled through the blaze in an attempt to save her life was in the same hospital with painful burns.

Zeno Dewell, 40 years old, colored, of 783 Morton street northwest, passed by the home of Josephine Robinson and saw the flames in the aged woman's room. He fought his way to her side and brought her out, but she died at Freedmen's Hospital a few hours later. Dewell was burned about the face and hands.

Capital Boy Found Blind in New York

Found groping his way along a sidewalk in New York early yesterday morning, William Ware, 19-year-old son of William Harry Ware, told police that he attended a mid-Broadway hotel and there had tasted liquor for the first time in his life.

Taken to a Harlem hospital, he was reported to be suffering from alcoholism and blindness by an ambulance surgeon. Ware told police that he had left the hotel and boarded a subway, and when he arrived on the street where he was found, he said, he began to lose his sight.

Ware gave his name and address and the address of a brother, who he said lived at 716 G street northwest. His father is a fireman at a local plant.

Vollbehr Loses Fight to Get $10,500 Fee in Book Sale

Otto M. Stanfield, New York lawyer, will not have to pay F. H. Vollbehr, famous collector of early editions, $10,500 in attorney's fees. The District Court of Appeals yesterday reversed a ruling of the District Supreme Court granting the fees because Vollbehr had been to great expense in defending Mr. Stanfield's suit over the $1,500,000 sale of early editions purchased by Congress.

After the sale, Mr. Stanfield attempted to collect a commission on it, alleging that he had been given a contract to aid in the ultimate sale of the books. He held up, by injunction, the payment of the $1,500,000 by Congress, and sued to attach some funds of Mr. Vollbehr in Washington.

The District Supreme Court held that Mr. Stanfield had not been materially instrumental in the sale and refused to permit him to attach the funds of Vollbehr. The collector then sued for attorney's fees, on the ground that he had been put to great expense through an unjust suit by Stanfield. The District Supreme Court allowed him $10,500, and it was this decision which was reversed and modified by the Appellate Court yesterday.
